master s thesis from the year 2013 in the subject psychology work business organisation grade 2 3 technical university of munich language english abstract when going for grocery shopping some consumers make up their minds about what to buy and write down shopping lists others just go into the supermarket and do not really think beforehand about the things they need although in both situations individuals engage in different ways of decision making on the purchase of groceries when coming home and putting things into the shelve they positively or negatively assess the things they bought whereas in some situations one gets a positive feeling because e g s he purchased all the products on the shopping list in another situation a consumer might end up being bored because s he just bought the groceries which are perceived as useful and did not listen to his her inner voice calling for more than just the fulfillment of utilitarian needs generally consumers can consciously do their purchases and decide for products after thinking on it or can consider a product s attributes and let their intuition decide in the interest of the consumer the question emerges how the consumer decides at best does a consumer receive greater satisfaction from consciously elaborating about the products s he is facing or is it better not to think consciously when facing product choices this question is differently assessed by different models on decision making whereas some authors ajzen 2011 bandura 1986 1997 deci ryan 1985 payne et al 1993 emphasize consciousness in decision making there is also a large number of proponents of unconscious thought dijksterhuis 2004 dijksterhuis et al 2005 2006a 2006b 2006c levine 1996 bargh 2002 and wilson et al 1993 dijksterhuis and nordgren 2006b p 96 argue for the superiority of unconscious decision making by mentioning that conscious thought is constrained by the low capacity of consciousness which results in sub optimal choices with regard to food products this general superiority of unconscious thought is highly questionable on the one hand consumers constrain themselves in taking into account only specific products which respect certain criteria as e g with diabetics and food products with less sugar content on the other hand food products are also bought because consumers want to confirm their conscience by purchasing e g fair trade products which among other things are associated with a fair payment of farmers teaching as decision making successful practices for the elementary teacher second edition provides comprehensive coverage of the major themes issues concepts and skill areas involved in planning implementing and evaluating instruction making a decision of any importance is never simple on the one hand specialists in decision theory do not come within the reach of most policy makers and secondly there are very few books on pragmatic decision that are not purely anecdotal in addition there is virtually no book that provides a link between decision making and action this book provides a bridge between the latest results in artificial intelligence neurobiology psychology and decision making for action what is the role of intuition or emotion what are the main psychological biases of which we must be wary how can we avoid being manipulated what is the proper use of planning how can we remain rational even if one is not an expert in probabilities perhaps more importantly for managers how does one go from decision to action so many questions fundamental to the practice of decision making are addressed this book dissects all issues that arise almost daily for decision makers at least for major decisions drawing on numerous examples this book answers in plain language and imagery all your questions the final chapter takes the form of a brief reminder everything you have to remember to be a good decision maker decisions and problems can often leave people with a dilemma knowing that a decision is required but uncertain how to ensure that it is the best one and that it will be successfully executed the paradox is that the very pressure for a decision often breeds indecisiveness think on your feet addresses this fundamental problem enabling you to find the best solutions and options avoid pitfalls managerisk work with people to ensure that decisions succeed and understand how you can improve the way you typically operate when making decisions
