in different states drawing on economic and empirical literature where available sahar akhtar tries to fill this gap by demonstrating why the idea of wrongful discrimination can be applied to states admission decisions and what this means in terms of states rights with regard to immigration rather than rejecting any connection between immigration decisions and identity akhtar argues that it is often morally permissible to exclude people based in their identity especially but not only when it is done by disadvantaged groups despite this finding however a major implication of the arguments and analysis provided here is that it is not plausible to think that states have the right to exclude thus akhtar concludes by demonstrating why states are not unilaterally entitled to make decisions about whom to admit into their borders
