a postwar italian novel which falls far short of silone s fontamara with which it is compared and similarly is disappointing viewed against the distinction of such films as shoe shine the open city and paisan mr pratolini has packed a tiny street in florence with a parade of characters and the effect is claustrophobic rather than microcosmic the action is centered in the middle 20 s in the small poverty stricken area of the via del corno where men like lando a sniveling pimp are alternating in and out of prison where the signora a retired diseased ex prostitute turned lesbian battens on young girls where maciste a blacksmith is killed by fascists because he is a communist where the nesi coal merchant brutalizes any woman that appeals to him where everybody goes to bed with everybody else and where the neighbors lean out of windows and exchange unsavory gossip avidly the couple of good characters are well hidden in the mire in an effort to make his novel tight the author has attempted to squeeze a galaxy of universal types into too small an area and the result belongs in the department of utter confusion it lacks light air space and in his effort to be significant pratolini succeeds only in being trite kirkus feminisms in the cinema provides a platform for both women filmmakers and the women who analyze their films. A review of books by well-known feminist theorists juxtaposes their work with that of women filmmakers. Each writer addresses some aspect of marginality, discussing it as a political strategy and as a challenge to power structures.

When reproduction becomes a political issue, where do you stand? A crisis of births, population politics and family making in Italy tells the fascinating story of Italian families in the 1990s. When Italy had the lowest birthrate of any nation in the world, you'll gain an in-depth understanding of why Italy's birthrate has fallen so low and what this means for Italians as individuals and Italy as a society. And how reproduction has become politicized. Personal dialogues with ordinary people ranging from sweater makers to counts and aging bachelors to doting mothers reveal how a silent revolution against patriarchy reshapes social and sexual morality to create new imperatives for family making.

When her daughter becomes so anorexic that her life is endangered, Maria is forced to review the family situation. Winner of the Villa San Giovanni prize of 1977.
