this book carves the beginnings of a new path in the arguably weary discipline of economics it combines a variety of perspectives from the history of ideas to epistemology in order to try to understand what has gone so wrong with economics and articulate a coherent way forward this is undertaken through a dual path of deconstruction and reconstruction mainstream economics is broken down into many of its key component parts and the history of each of these parts is scrutinized closely when the flaws are thoroughly understood the author then begins the task of reconstruction what emerges is not a grand unified theory of everything but rather a provisional map outlining a new terrain for economists to explore the reformation in economics is written in a lively and engaging style that aims less at the formalization of dogma and more at the exploration of ideas this truly groundbreaking work invites readers to rethink their current understanding of economics as a discipline and is particularly relevant for those interested in economic pluralism and alternative economics in some cases of insurgency the combat frontier is contested and erratic as rebels target cities as their economic prey in other cases it is tidy and stable seemingly representing an equilibrium in which cities are effectively protected from violent non state actors what factors account for these differences in the interface between urban based states and rural based challengers to explore this question this volume examines two regions representing two dramatically different outcomes in west africa liberia and sierra leone capital cities became economic targets for rebels who posed dire threats to the survival of the state in maoist india despite an insurgent ideology aiming to overthrow the state via a strategy of progressive city capture the combat frontier effectively firewalls cities from maoist violence this book argues that trade networks underpinning the economic relationship between rural and urban areas termed interstitial economies may differ dramatically in their impact on and response to the combat frontier it explains rebel predatory tendencies towards cities as a function of transport networks allowing monopoly profits to be made by urban based traders it explains combat frontier delineation as a function of the social structure of the trade networks hierarchical networks permit elite elite bargains that cohere the frontier these factors represent what might be termed respectively the hardware and software of the rural urban economic relationship of interest to any student of political economy and violence this book presents new arguments and insights about the relationships between violence and the economy predation and production core and periphery
