since the mid 1980s whimsical brightly colored wood carvings from the mexican state of oaxaca have found their way into gift shops and private homes across the united states and europe as western consumers seek to connect with the authenticity and tradition represented by indigenous folk arts ironically however the oaxacan wood carvings are not a traditional folk art invented in the mid twentieth century by non indian mexican artisans for the tourist market their appeal flows as much from intercultural miscommunication as from their intrinsic artistic merit in this beautifully illustrated book michael chibnik offers the first in depth look at the international trade in oaxacan wood carvings including their history production marketing and cultural representations drawing on interviews he conducted in the carving communities and among wholesalers retailers and consumers he follows the entire production and consumption cycle from the harvesting of copal wood to the final purchase of the finished piece along the way he describes how and why this invented tradition has been promoted as a zapotec indian craft and explores its similarities with other local crafts with longer histories he also fully discusses the effects on local communities of participating in the global market concluding that the trade in oaxacan wood carvings is an almost paradigmatic case study of globalization

there appears to be an idea abroad to the effect that the humour of holland could be most satisfactorily dealt with in a chapter resembling the famous one of snakes in ireland as the average english reader in the most favourable instances knows little more of dutch literature than a name or two rembrandt has introduced us to the poet vondel and if southey were not so little read in these days bilderdijk and cats would not be so unfamiliar the subject offers a free field to the constructive imagination yet even so one would think it must be obvious that the nation which has produced a teniers a jan steen and in some of his moods a rembrandt could not be entirely destitute of humour the estimate of its quality may be a question of taste but though many people practically do adopt this form of logic we cannot make the fact of our not finding it to our liking a ground for denying its existence of course before determining what the humour of a nation is like we need to know what is that nation s intellectual bent as a whole and what forces have been at work to determine its character on this point we may quote a paragraph or two from a dutch writer j h hooijer whom we shall meet again in the course of these pages he is describing a village in north holland in the heart of the fat meadow lands famous for the production of dutch cheeses the same village which you find so depressing this november day so damp so clammy so dripping with water makes a very different impression when spring with full hands has showered her blossom snow over the orchards or in the autumn when the trees are hanging full of golden pears or rosy apples greener meadow land is nowhere on earth unless it be in the emerald isle itself the rich green pastures have velvety lights in the sunshine and the splendid cattle their dappled skins smooth and shining as silk show out to advantage against it colour on colour at such times there is a glow of colour in the whole landscape which strange as it may sound reminds one of the south a glow one might almost think was stolen from the palettes of the old masters every breath you draw is perfumed with new milk and flowers mingled with the salt smell of the sea there is a fulness of outward life a bubbling up and overflowing of vital juices for which they had an eye and a heart those great old realists the man who despises a rich clover pasture speckled here and there with white fleeced sheep who cannot spare a look for the magnificent horned cattle that stand staring at you with dreamy half sad gaze over the fence while geertje s black eyes flash at you from behind the milking pail well he need not come to north holland intellects of this sort exclusively devoted to the contemplation of the sublime will find everything ugly in these parts to such an one our old masters have nothing to say for him paul potter s art is a mere waste of time and many a racy bit of vondel trivial nonsense happily the cheery sun is of another mind and his smile falls well pleased on the endless emerald plain he nurses it feeds it warms it he sweetens the blades of grass for the palate of the pampered cow and sometimes just before setting he draws along the horizon with purple finger broad streaks of crimson fire and then the dykes flame out like ruby bands winding over the green velvet robe of the earth and you wish for the power of wielding the brush so as to throw on canvas what one might almost call these brutal effects of colour
