in 1958 Mildred Jeter and Richard Loving, two young lovers from Caroline County, Virginia, got married. Soon they were hauled out of their bedroom in the middle of the night and taken to jail. Their crime? Loving was white, Jeter was not, and in Virginia, as in twenty-three other states, then, interracial marriage was illegal. Their experience reflected that of countless couples across America since colonial times, and in challenging the laws against their marriage, the Lovings closed the book on that very long chapter in the nation's history: race, sex, and the freedom to marry. This book tells the story of this couple and the case that forever changed the law of race and marriage in America. The story of the Lovings and the case they took to the Supreme Court involved a community, an extended family, and in particular five main characters: the couple, two young attorneys, and a crusty local judge who twice presided over their case, as well as such key dimensions of political and cultural life as race, gender, religion, law, identity, and family. In Race Sex and the Freedom to Marry, Peter Wallenstein brings these characters and their legal travails to life and situates them within the wider context, even at the center of American history. Along the way, he untangles the arbitrary distinctions that long sorted out Americans by racial identity, distinctions that changed over time, varied across space, and could extend the reach of criminal law into the most remote community. In light of the related legal arguments and historical development, moreover, Wallenstein compares interracial and same-sex marriage. A fair amount is known about the saga of the Lovings and the historic court decision that permitted them to be married and remain free, and some of what is known, Wallenstein tells us, is actually true. A detailed, in-depth account of the case, as compelling for its legal and historical insights as for its human drama, this book at long last clarifies the events and the personalities that reconfigured race, marriage, and law in America.

The new single woman's bible that shows how to distinguish Mr. Right from Mr. Right Now, Father Pat Connor knows marriages. Having presided over more than two hundred weddings and conducted pre-marriage and marriage counseling for more than forty years, he's something of an expert, and now he is sharing his wealth of experience with women everywhere on the subject of whom not to marry. Father Pat's philosophy is simple: a love affair may lead to marriage, but love itself cannot make a marriage work. That's why it's important to weed out the bad seeds before you fall in love. Sounds easy enough, but in the early stages of romance, when infatuation trumps judgment, it can be difficult to see the flaws in your mate and to think rationally about your future. That's where this book comes in. A heavenly how-not-to-whom-not-to-marry offers timely and time-honored advice, such as: never marry a man who has no friends, for he won't be capable of the intimacy that marriage demands; never marry a man who isn't responsible with cash, for most marriages that flounder do so because of money; a case of til debt do us part; never marry a man who lets you walk all over him; it's good to have a doormat in the house, but not if it's your husband's life. It may seem random, but there are many things you can do to make sure your life partner is the right one. It all starts with being honest with yourself. Use your good judgment. Father Pat counsels: know what you want, know who is worth loving, and who is worth marrying. Once you can do that, you'll stand a much better
