jonathan edwards has most often been considered in the context of the puritanism of new england in many ways however he was closer to the thinkers of the european enlightenment in this book leon chai explores that connection analyzing edwards thought in light of a number of the issues that preoccupied such enlightenment figures as locke descartes malebranche and leibniz the book comprises three parts each of which begins with a detailed analysis of a crucial passage from a classic enlightenment text and then turns to a major theological work of jonathan edwards in which the same issue is explored unimaginable bodies radically resituates academic discussions of intellectual disability through building relationships between philosophy cultural studies and communities of integrated dance theatre practice anna hickey moody argues that dance theatre devised with and performed by young people with and without intellectual disability can reframe the ways in which bodies with intellectual disability are known this proposition is considered in terms of classic philosophical ideas of how we think the mind and body as hickey moody argues that dance theatre performed by young people with and without intellectual disability creates a context in which the intellectually disabled body is understood in terms other than those that pre suppose a cartesian mind body dualism taking up the writings of spinoza and deleuze and guattari hickey moody critiques aspects of medical discourses of intellectual disability arguing that cartesian methods for thinking about the body are recreated within these discourses further she shows that cartesian ways of conceiving corporeality can be traced through select studies of the social construction of intellectual disability the argument for theorising corporeality and embodied knowledge that hickey moody constructs is a philosophical interpretation of the processes of knowledge production and subjectification that occur in integrated dance theatre knowledge produced within integrated dance theatre is translated into thought in order to explore the affective nature of performance texts this book is essential reading for those interested in theories of embodiment disability studies and dance cover image ziggy kuster gigibori invaders of the soul photography david wilson ã restless dance company sensibility and creation 1977 comprises a dozen critical studies by different contributors on a selection of major french poets of the twentieth century these range from poets of long established reputation such as paul valéry pierre reverdy saint john perse and paul eluard to contemporary poets such as yves Bonnefoy and Jacques Dupin the guiding theme is that of the characteristic sensibility which informs the creative work of each poet the way he has of selecting and patterning the elements which make up the world he inhabits and which in a sense he is also creating in some instances the poetry is examined for its selective textures and shapes and in others the critical focus is more closely directed to the linguistic and stylistic strategies adopted by the writer

what does it mean to exist in our experience of cinema according to listening how do sound and noise reconfigure relations between spectators and screens and by extension spectators and their worlds how do films raise questions about the ethics and politics of listening to different bodies resonant bodies in contemporary european art cinema answers these questions through an analysis of films by catherine breillat gaspar noe tony gatlif arnaud des pallieres lars von trier and peter strickland these post millennial european directors have worked with sound in ways that resist the full definition and perfect hearing offered by dolby technology instead they have privileged noise sounds that take us to the limit of what we can hear in a move that foregrounds the body on screen and constructs spectators as listening bodies
