before the ussr collapsed ethnic identities were imposed by the state this book analyzes how and why jews decided what being jewish meant to them after the state dissolved and describes the historical evolution of jewish identities surveys of more than 6 000 jews in the early and late 1990s reveal that russian and ukrainian jews have a deep sense of their jewishness but are uncertain what it means they see little connection between judaism and being jewish their attitudes toward judaism intermarriage and jewish nationhood differ dramatically from those of jews elsewhere many think jews can believe in christianity and do not condemn marrying non jews this complicates their connections with other jews resettlement in israel the united states and germany and the rebuilding of public jewish life in russia and ukraine post communist jews especially the young are transforming religious based practices into ethnic traditions and increasingly manifesting their jewishness in public a fresh look at acts of the apostles and its depiction of jewish identity within the larger roman era when considering jewish identity in acts of the apostles scholars have often emphasized jewish and christian religious difference an emphasis that masks the intersections of civic ethnic and religious identifications in antiquity christopher stroup's innovative work explores the depiction of jewish and christian identity by analyzing ethnicity within a broader material and epigraphic context examining acts through a new lens he shows that the text presents jews and jewish identity in multiple complex ways rather than as a simple foil for christianity stroup convincingly argues that when the modern distinctions among ethnic religious and civic identities are suspended the innovative ethnic rhetoric of the author of acts comes into focus the author of acts leverages the power of god's ancestry and physical space to legitimate christian identity as a type of jewish identity and to present christian non jews as jewish converts through the power of the holy spirit
