the silence of god 1897 has become a classic on the subject of why god has not directly intervened in the affairs of men for the past two thousand years here s how anderson puts the question he addresses and to not a few this volume may be welcome as affording a clue to pressing difficulties which perplex and distress the thoughtful infidelity trades upon the silence of heaven the inaction of the supreme if there be a god almighty and all good why does he not use his power and give proof of his goodness in the way men choose to expect of him the answer usually offered by the christian apologist fails either to silence the opponent or to satisfy the believer and rightly so for it is lacking not only in cogency but in sympathy the god of the bible is infinite both in power and in compassion and in other ages his people had public proof of this why then is he so silent from the introduction by translator geoffrey w bromiley helmut thielicke has a vivid awareness of the actual needs of actual people living in this age of supreme storm and stress he sees how the biblical message how jesus christ himself as the living message answers powerfully and sufficiently to these needs he appreciates that faith in him is not an easy thing and yet that true faith carries us to victory even in doubt anxiety distress and the terrors of conflict and destruction he attains almost an apocalyptic stature in his depiction of our shattered world and in his proclamation of the message of God's salvation and judgements within it here are sermons to put into the hands of contemporaries who suffer from the fears and anxieties which thielicke so graphically describes but who do not yet perceive the true meaning and relevance of what God did for man in the giving of his only son here are sermons from which to learn how the old gospel first given in a very different world may come with all the living comfort and the regenerative force of truth and reality to our own age too made relevant by the holy spirit on the lips of the sensitive and dedicated preacher
