this thesis deals with two theories of international trade the theory of comparative advantage which is connected to the name david ricardo and is dominating current trade theory and adam smith s theory of absolute advantage both theories are compared and their assumptions are scrutinised the former theory is rejected on theoretical and empirical grounds in favour of the latter on the basis of the theory of absolute advantage developments of free international trade are examined whereby the focus is on trade between industrial and underdeveloped countries the main conclusions are that trade patterns are determined by absolute production cost advantages and that the gap between developed and poor countries is not reduced but rather increased by free trade diploma thesis from the year 2006 in the subject economics international economic relations grade 1 o university of leipzig institut für wirtschaftspolitik 129 entries in the bibliography language english abstract in the prevailing paper i will argue that the current institutional structure of the multilateral trade negotiations is the decisive factor that limits considerable progress in the liberalization of international agricultural markets wto members face a growing institutional complexity which does not allow for substantial liberalization steps rather countries need to find alternative ways to improve their individual trade balance my examinations will base on the insights of the new institutional theory nie which puts its scientific interest on institutions since institutions serve as a direct interface of societal processes including economical as well as political characteristics its application provides an appropriate attempt to approach multilateral trade negotiations a subject that indeed touches both areas seminar paper from the year 2009 in the subject economics case scenarios grade 1 3 cologne business school k? In language english abstract in its latest white paper on international economy and trade 2009 the japanese ministry of economy trade and industry listed prevention of protectionism as one of its courses for domestic and foreign integrated economic measures ministry of economy trade and industry 2009 with 153 member states in the world trade organization formerly known as general agreement on tariffs and trade which is a multilateral institution that liberalizes trade establishes trade agreements and solves trade disputes one might think that protectionism should not be a problem in the 21st century. In 2009, Japan joined the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) in 1955 and is still a member of the World Trade Organization (WTO) today. However, the government of this nation still feels the necessity to use protectionist measures in a paper published in June 2009. The World Trade Organization (WTO) thus arises the question of how important protectionism is for Japan nowadays. This question will be answered by explaining protectionist measures and looking at the historical development of such measures in Japan since 1945. In the agricultural sector, the agricultural sector is interesting since Japan's agricultural imports accounted to over $50 billion in 2008. After the United States of America and the European Union, Japan is the third largest importer of agricultural goods. Based on total calories consumed, Japan imports about 60 per cent of its food sources annually. United States Department of Agriculture Economic Research Service (2009a) by evaluating official government sources, the current situation is assessed and the effects of protectionist measures on imports by focusing on the agricultural sector will be elaborated.
