rooted in thousands of pages of access to information documents and dozens of interviews carried out throughout Latin America. Blood of Extraction examines the increasing presence of Canadian mining companies in Latin America and the environmental and human rights abuses that have occurred as a result. By following the money, Gordon and Webber illustrate the myriad ways Canadian-based multinational corporations backed by the Canadian state have developed extensive economic interests in Latin America over the last two decades at the expense of Latin American people and the environment. Latin American communities affected by Canadian resource extraction are now organized into hundreds of opposition movements from Mexico to Argentina and the authors illustrate the strategies used by the Canadian state to silence this resistance and advance corporate interests.

In 1989 the International Labor Organization stated that all indigenous peoples living in the postcolonial world were entitled to the right to prior consultation over activities that could potentially impact their territories and traditional livelihoods however in many cases the economic importance of industries such as mining and oil condition the way that governments implement the right to prior consultation this book explores extractive conflicts between indigenous populations the government and oil and mining companies in latin america namely mexico peru and bolivia building on two years of research and drawing on the state corporate and environmental crime literatures this book examines the legal extralegal illegal as well as political strategies used by the state and extractive companies to avoid undesired results produced by the legalization of the right to prior consultation it examines the ways in which prior consultation is utilized by powerful indigenous actors to negotiate economic resources with the state and extractive companies while also showing the ways in which weaker indigenous groups are incapable of engaging in prior consultations in a meaningful way and are therefore left at the mercy of negative ecological impacts it demonstrates how social mobilization not prior consultation is the most effective strategy in preventing extraction from moving forward within ecologically fragile indigenous territories
