after several decades spent in astronomical semi obscurity the moon has of late suddenly emerged as an object of considerable interest to students of astronomy as well as of other branches of natural science and technology and the reasons for this are indeed of historical significance for the moon has now been destined to be the first celestial body outside the confines of our own planet to be reconnoitered at a close range by means of spacecraft built and sent out by human hand for this purpose at the time of writing not less than ten such spacecraft of american as well as rus sian origin landed already on different parts of the lunar surface and some of these provided remarkable records of its detail structure to a spatial resolution increased thousandfold over that attained so far from our ground based facilities a renewed interest in our satellite stemming from this source on the part of the students of many branches of science and technology has also underlined the need for presenting the gist of our present knowledge in this field in the form that could serve as an introduction to the study of the moon not only for astronomers but also for serious students from other branches of science or technology

a favourable reception of the first edition of this book due no doubt to the nature of its subject which went out of print in 2 years gave its author a welcome opportunity to update at present its contents this was all the more necessary as seldom in the annals of science has our knowledge of the physics and astronomy of the moon made greater progress than during this time the real heroes of this advance have of course been the spacecraft 33 of which have now been sent out since 1959 to reconnoiter our satellite at a close range the hard landers among them just about delivered their message by the time when the first edition of this book went to the press but it was the soft landers and orbiters which followed in their wake between 1966 67 that became really the principal contributors to lunar research by now that it may be both timely and their programmes have likewise been completed so opportune to take stock of the present state of our subject now on the eve of the next stage of lunar exploration by manned landings on the surface of our satellite which can be expected to take place in the very near future the aim of the second edition of this book will be to provide the requisite information brought up to date in an organized manner includes entries for maps and atlases
