singapore has been taken by many researchers as a fascinating living language policy and planning laboratory language and education policy in singapore has been pivotal not only to the establishment and growth of schooling but to the very project of nation building since their inception mother tongue policies have been established with two explicit goals firstly there is the development and training of human and intellectual capital for the expansion and networking of a singaporean service and information economy secondly there is the maintenance of cultural heritage and values as a means for social cohesion and indeed the maintenance of community and regional social capital these tasks have been fraught with tension and contradiction both in relation to the conditions of rapid cultural economic and political change in asia and globally but as well because of the tensions between the so called world language english and singapore's three other official languages tamil malay and mandarin this has been complicated of course by the challenges of vibrant regional dialects and the emergence of singlish as a powerful medium of community life literacy education has persistently been regarded as ideologically and politically neutral as a technical matter and as a straightforward benefit for individuals and communities knowledge culture and power overturns these ideas through a series of original and diverse pieces that powerfully expose some of the unquestioned preconceptions that literacy as social exchange examines the intersection of culture and literacy education in particular it explores the roles that class race ethnicity and gender play in students learning to negotiate the conventions of academic discourse it argues that recent literacy scholarship has tended to isolate class gender and culture as discrete marginalizing factors but such isolation may unintentionally silence voices from non western non mainstream cultures writing program administrators and writing teachers who are interested in constructing programs that address the needs of all students in increasingly multicultural classrooms will need to examine how cultural factors influence the way students learn to read write and think critically the author points out that some of the most influential scholars writing about the plight of underprivileged writers teach at some of the most exclusive institutions in the nation these basic writers are not nearly so disadvantaged as many of the student writers most writing teachers encounter every day the author explores enrollment trends in higher education that indicate conclusively that writing classrooms will soon be filled with students from non western non mainstream cultures because these students rhetorical and literacy traditions will be unlike both those of their teachers and of the basic writers upon which so much literacy scholarship focuses educators and literacy scholars need to increasingly conceptualize literacy in its larger political social and economic contexts literacy is thought to be one of the primary cultural transmitters of information and beliefs within any society where it exists yet when considered as a social phenomenon literacy is remarkably difficult to define because its functions meanings and methods of learning vary from one cultural group to the next this book compares and contrasts our understanding of literacy and its acquisition and retention it addresses major debates in education policy today such as the importance of mother tongue literacy programs the notion of literacy relapse and the concept of educational poverty the author focuses on moroccan children whose parents are unschooled whose language is often different from that used in the classroom and whose first instruction often involves rote religious teaching this book examines the linkage between literacy and linguistic diversity embedding them in their social and cultural contexts it illustrates that a more complete understanding of literacy among diverse populations and in multicultural societies requires attention to issues of literacy per se as well as to improving an educational process that has relevance beyond members of majority cultures and linguistic groups the focus of the book is on the social and cultural contexts in which literacy develops and is enacted with an emphasis on the north american situation educators and researchers are discovering that cognitive approaches while very valuable are insufficient by themselves to answer important questions about literacy in heterogeneous societies by considering the implications of family school culture society and nation for literary processes the book answers the following questions in a multi ethnic context what does it mean to be literate what are the processes involved in becoming and being literate in a second language in what ways is literacy in a second language similar and in what ways is it different from mother tongue literacy what factors must be understood to better describe and facilitate literacy acquisition among members of ethnic and linguistic minorities what are some current approaches that are being used to accomplish this these are vital questions for researchers and educators in a world that has a large number of immigrants a variety of multi ethnic and multi lingual societies and an increasing degree of multinational activity beyond addressing applied concerns attending to these questions can provide new insights into basic aspects of literacy
