how ought christian faith and theology understand the concept of human immortality today and what if anything might be distinctively christian about such a concept the contributors to this volume explore how our thinking about the prospect of human immortality is decisively determined by what we receive of the limitless life of the triune god of the gospel and how our understanding of immortality is made concrete by the christian hope in the resurrection of the body and the life everlasting debates about how best to understand the eternal life of god are directly significant to how we can imagine the promise of eternal life while immortality is generally conceived to be a future qualification of human reality theological approaches to the question of personal immortality must investigate the difference that the hope and promise of such eternal life makes in the living of present day spiritual life as well as in our common moral and political existence to understand immortality as an eschatological gift of god requires that we take account of it as a formative factor at the foundations of the christian life the newtonian concept of time has been changed by einsteinian insight yet the einsteinian world view might make it difficult to appreciate traditional concepts of eschatology like heaven and hell death and immortality life after death and resurrection last day and final judgments because these expressions presuppose a pre einsteinian view of the universe since theology cannot remain unaffected by the new research in concepts of time eternity and eternal life tries to express the eschatological faith of the church by using the time language of our age to achieve this it provides an overview on the research in the nature of time done in geology cosmology physics biology psychology sociology history and philosophy and proposes a notion of time for timely christology and for timely eschatology by using the singularity event as literary form horvath scrutinizes how christ's time can lead to the times of all existing realities through death to eternity this is a pioneering work one that needs to be tested in the community of interested readers it is a communal search for an understanding of life death and eternal life not only in the light of abstract ideas and cultural linguistic doctrines in the world of religions but also in the light of science and especially of a person as the horizon of understanding for both time and eternity christ as the eschatological union of time and eternity becomes the work's unifying focus and its paradigm which solves recognized problems and opens our minds to new ones
