bachelor thesis from the year 2015 in the subject business economics investment and finance grade 96 110 course principles of international finance language english abstract this thesis project aims to test the hypothesis whether or not there exists enough empirical evidence to prove that companies from developed countries with well functioning capital markets have seen deteriorating benefits from cross listing in the united states we find evidence that support our hypothesis in light of the significant number of european companies terminating their u s cross listings after requirements for deregistering listings from the u s became less stringent in the year 2007 the trend also continued with the number of cross listings by companies from the developed world steadily declining during the subsequent five years the most cited reasons for cross listing in the united states such as greater access to investors liquidity a higher valuation and thus a lower cost of capital seems not to hold as strongly anymore at least not for companies that come from countries where its capital markets have experienced a steady development in corporate governance standards so as to match that of the united states evidence point to the fact that the benefits that held for all non u s firms still hold strongly only for those companies coming from emerging economies and whose equity market standards are still well below that of stock exchanges in the united states bachelor thesis from the year 2008 in the subject business economics business management corporate governance grade a university of amsterdam course bachelor of science in accounting control language english abstract this paper investigates the adequacy of ifrs 7 by measuring companies compliance and extent of disclosure adequacy is defined as to what extent does the standard achieves its objective which is to require entities to disclose certain information associated with the use of financial instruments for this purpose the annual reports of 21 european electricity companies with fiscal years ending december 31 2007 have been examined the author constructed an unweighted disclosure index of 103 items based on the ifrs 7 requirements for quantifying the extent of disclosure the results suggest that the sample companies varied in disclosure levels certain required disclosures were sometimes not provided for instance the majority of the sample companies provided quantitative disclosures of market risk however the market risk measurement models are insufficiently explained the limitations inherent to the models used were usually not discussed further the results show that electricity companies were not keen on providing additional disclosures this study also seeks to find associations between the extent of disclosure and some corporate characteristics of which statistical relationships were found in prior literature such as corporate size listing status profitability leverage and auditor size however this ended up without any significant findings this is likely due to the sample size which is inappropriate for statistical testing finally the paper concludes that the shortcomings in disclosure call for regulation it is expected that if no regulation were in place little would be disclosed with respect to risk associated with the use of financial instruments
