employing a wide range of examples from Uncle Tom's Cabin and Birth of a Nation to Zelig and Personal Best Janet Staiger argues that a historical examination of spectators' responses to films can make a valuable contribution to the history, criticism and philosophy of cultural products. She maintains that as artifacts, films do not contain immanent meanings; that differences among interpretations have historical bases and that these variations are due to social, political and economic conditions as well as the viewers' constructed images of themselves. After proposing a theory of reception study, the author demonstrates its application mainly through analyzing the varying responses of audiences to certain films at specific moments in history. Staiger gives special attention to how questions of class, gender, sexual preference, race and ethnicity enter into film viewers' interpretations. Her analysis reflects recent developments in post-structuralism, cognitive psychology, psychoanalysis and cultural studies and includes a discussion of current reader response models in literary and film studies as well as an alternative approach for thinking about historical readers and spectators.

Censorship has been an ongoing issue from the early days of filmmaking. One hundred years of film censorship encompassing the entire 20th century are chronicled in this work. The freewheeling nature of films in the early decades was profoundly affected by prohibition, the depression and the formation of the Legion of Decency, culminating in a new age of restrictiveness in the movies. Such powerful arbiters of public taste as Will Hays of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America and Joseph Breen of the Production Code Association fomented an era whereby films with contentious material were severely censored or even condemned. This held sway until rebellious filmmakers like Otto Preminger challenged the system in the 1950s, eventually resulting in the abandonment of the old regime in favor of the contemporary G through NC-17 ratings system.

This new edition features numerous updates and additions. Especially 4 new chapters on fiber optics, integrated optics, frequency combs and interferometry reflect the changes since the first edition. In addition, major complete updates for the chapters on optical materials and their properties, optical detectors, nanooptics and optics far beyond the diffraction limit. Features contain over 1000 two-color illustrations, includes over 120 comprehensive tables with properties of optical materials and light sources, emphasizes physical concepts over extensive mathematical derivations, chapters with summaries, detailed index, delivers a wealth of up-to-date references.

Combining history, politics and critical analysis, he revisits the killing fields of Cambodia, documents the three-month Hutu machete genocide of about 800,000 Tutsi villagers in Rwanda and casts recent headlines from Kosovo in the light of these other conflicts. Book jacket.

In this work of historical imagination, Jacobson argues that race resides in contingencies of politics and culture, linking whiteness studies to traditional historical inquiry. He shows that in a nation of immigrants, race has been at the core of civic assimilation. Ethnic minorities in becoming American were re-racialized to become Caucasian.
