1905 it is an expanded version of the short story Sara Crewe or what happened at Miss Minchin's which was serialized in St. Nicholas Magazine from December 1887 and published in book form in 1888. Captain Richard Crewe, a wealthy English widower, has been raising his only child, Sara, in India where he is stationed with the British Army because the Indian climate is considered too harsh for children. British families living there traditionally send their children to boarding school back home in England. The captain enrolls his young daughter at Miss Minchin's boarding school for girls in London and dotes on his daughter so much that he orders and pays the headmistress for special treatment and exceptional luxuries for Sara, such as a private room for her with a personal maid and a separate sitting room (see parlour boarder) along with Sara's own private carriage and a pony. Miss Minchin openly fawns over Sara for her money but secretly and jealously despises her for her wealth. Despite her privilege, Sara is neither selfish nor snobbish but rather kind and gentle. She extends her friendship to Ermengarde, the school dunce; to Lottie, a four-year-old pupil given to tantrums; and to Becky, the lowly, stunted fourteen-year-old scullery maid. When Sara acquires the epithet Princess, she embraces its favorable elements in her natural goodheartedness. After some time, Sara's birthday is celebrated at Miss Minchin's with a lavish party attended by all her friends and classmates. Just as it ends, Miss Minchin learns of Captain Crewe's unfortunate demise. Furthermore, prior to his death, the previously wealthy captain had lost his entire fortune. A friend had persuaded him to cash in his investments and deposit the proceeds to develop a network of diamond mines. The scheme fails, and Sara is left an orphan and a pauper with no other family and nowhere to go. Miss Minchin is left with a sizable unpaid bill for Sara's school fees and luxuries, including her birthday party. Infuriated and pitiless, she takes away all of Sara's possessions except for some old frocks and one doll. She makes her live in a cold and poorly furnished attic and forces her to earn her keep by working as an errand girl. She forces Sara to wear frocks much too short for her, with her thin legs peeking out of the brief skirts. For the next several years, Sara is abused by Miss Minchin and the other servants except for Becky. Miss Minchin's kind sister, Amelia, deplores the way that Sara is treated but is too weak-willed to speak up about it. Sara is starved, worked for long hours, sent out in all weathers, poorly dressed in outgrown and worn-out clothes, and deprived of warmth or a comfortable bed in the attic despite her hardships sara is consoled by her friends and uses her imagination to cope pretending she is a prisoner in the bastille or a princess disguised as a servant sara also continues to be kind to everyone including those who find her annoying or mistreat her one day she finds a coin in the street and uses it to buy buns at a bakery but despite being very hungry she gives most of the buns away to a beggar girl dressed in rags who is hungrier than herself the bakery shop owner sees this and wants to reward sara but she has disappeared so the shop owner instead gives the beggar girl bread and warm shelter for sara s sake
