this title was first published in 2002 a critical look at the experiences of disabled people in accessing and receiving community care in the uk the author uses a framework of citizenship encompassing civil and social rights to ask difficult questions about the role the welfare state plays in preventing and promoting people's independence the book discusses the relationship between rationing policy professional practice and the needs of disabled people and their families from a citizenship perspective and provides critical insight into possible solutions to promoting disabled people's citizenship and independence within the limits of today's welfare state this book explores the series of issues that emerge at the intersection of disability care and family law disability studies is an area of increasing academic interest in addition to a subject in its own right there has been growing concern to ensure that mainstream subjects diversify and include marginalised voices including those of disabled people family law in modern times is often based on an able bodied autonomous norm but can fit less well with the complexities of living with disability in response this book addresses a range of important and highly topical issues whether care proceedings are used too often in cases where parents have disabilities how the law should respond to children who care for disabled parents and the care of older family members with disabilities it also considers the challenges posed by the un convention on the rights of persons with disabilities particularly around the different institutional and state responsibilities captured in the convention and around decision making for both disabled adults and children this interdisciplinary collection with contributors from law criminology sociology and social policy as well as from policy and activist backgrounds will appeal to academic family lawyers and disability scholars as well as students interested in issues around family law disability and care this book focuses on the lived realities of disabled mothers to examine how they navigate their multiple competing responsibilities and identities it reimagines normative constructions of motherhood dependency and care while rethinking advocacy and resistance in the context of disability gender and mental health it essentially argues that disabled women negotiate a delicate balancing act they constantly work at proving their competence even as they push the boundaries of normative femininity the book is grounded in qualitative research on disabled mothers in these conversations disabled mothers described various aspects of their motherhood journey ranging from their interactions with society to their daily experiences within the household drawing from critical disability studies critical psychology care theory and feminist scholarship this interdisciplinary volume elaborates on the everyday situations that disabled mothers encounter and the strategies they engage in to provide care for their children this book will be relevant for students and scholars in disability studies psychology gender studies development studies medical anthropology and sociology and medical humanities among others further the use of case studies makes it an essential read for practitioners and policymakers recognising the political significance of plain language in disability studies the book s accessible language will appeal to academic lay and practitioner audiences the second edition now in two volumes rather than one contains some 30 new chapters addressing a greatly increased number of topics and range of issues from a variety of disciplines the first volume offers discussion of general issues in the theory assessment and treatment of developmental dis
