speaking the earth's languages brings together for the first time critical discussions of postcolonial poetics from australia and chile the book crosses multiple languages landscapes and disciplines and draws on a wide range of both oral and written poetries in order to make strong claims about the importance of a nomad poetics not only for understanding aboriginal or mapuche writing practices but more widely for the problems confronting contemporary literature and politics in colonized landscapes the book begins by critiquing canonical examples of non indigenous postcolonial poetics incisive readings of two icons of australian and chilean poetry judith wright 1915 2000 and pablo neruda 1904 1973 provide rich insights into non indigenous responses to colonization in the wake of modernity the second half of the book establishes compositional links between aboriginal and mapuche poetics and between such oral and written poetics more generally the book's final part develops an emerging synthesis of contemporary aboriginal and mapuche poetics with reference to the work of two of the most important avant garde aboriginal and mapuche poets of recent times lionel fogarty 1958 and paulo huirimilla 1973 speaking the earth's languages uses these fascinating links between aboriginal and mapuche poetics as the basis of a deliberately nomadic open ended theory for an australian chilean postcolonial poetics the central argument of this book the author writes is that a nomadic poetics is essential for a genuinely postcolonial form of habitation or a habitation of colonized landscapes that doesn't continue to replicate colonialist ideologies involving indigenous dispossession and environmental exploitation

the aboriginal australian first arrived on the continent at least 60 000 years ago occupying and adapting to a range of environmental conditions from tropical estuarine habitats densely forested regions open plains and arid desert country to cold mountainous and often wet and snowy high country cultures adapted according to the different conditions and adapted again to environmental changes brought about by rising sea levels at the end of the last ice age european colonization of the island continent in 1788 not only introduced diseases to which aborigines had no immunity but also began an enduring and at times violent conflict over land and resources reconciliation between aborigines and the settler population remains unresolved this second edition of the historical dictionary of australian aborigines contains a chronology an introduction an extensive bibliography and more than 300 cross referenced entries on the politics economy foreign relations religion and culture of the aborigines this book is an excellent resource for students researchers and anyone wanting to know more about the indigenous people of australia
