we consider the fiscal multiplier and spillover in an environment in which two countries are caught simultaneously in a liquidity trap using an optimizing two country sticky price model we show that the fiscal multiplier and spillover are contrary to those predicted in textbook economics for the country with government expenditure the fiscal multiplier exceeds one the currency depreciates and the terms of trade worsen the fiscal spillover is negative if the intertemporal elasticity of substitution in consumption is less than one and positive if the parameter is greater than one incomplete stabilization of marginal costs due to the existence of the zero lower bound is a crucial factor in understanding the effects of fiscal policy in open economies author's abstract

this paper integrates models of atemporal risk preference that relax the independence axiom into a recursive intertemporal asset pricing framework the resulting models are amenable to empirical analysis using market data and standard euler equation methods we are thereby able to provide the first non laboratory based evidence regarding the usefulness of several new theories of risk preference for addressing standard problems in dynamic economics using both stock and bond returns data we find that a model incorporating risk preferences that exhibit first order risk aversion accounts for significantly more of the mean and autocorrelation properties of the data than models that exhibit only second order risk aversion unlike the latter class of models which require parameter estimates that are outside of the admissible parameter space e.g. negative rates of time preference the model with first order risk aversion generates point estimates that are economically meaningful we also examine the relationship between first order risk aversion and models that employ exogenous stochastic switching processes for consumption growth frech analyzes the changing nature of competition in this market with a specific focus on competition among physicians hospitals and insurance companies this paper considers the use of the polynomial distributed lag pdl technique when the lag length is estimated rather than fixed we focus on the case where the degree of the polynomial is fixed the polynomial is constrained to be zero at a certain lag length q and q is estimated along with the other parameters we extend the traditional pdl setup by allowing q to be real valued rather than integer valued and we derive the asymptotic covariance matrix of all the parameter estimates including the estimate of q the paper also considers the estimation of distributed leads rather than lags a case that can arise if expectations are assumed to be rational
