renowned for their monumental architecture and rich visual culture the moche inhabited the north coast of peru during the early intermediate period ad 100 800 archaeological discoveries over the past century and the dissemination of moche artifacts to museums around the world have given rise to a widespread and continually increasing fascination with this complex culture which expressed its beliefs about the human and supernatural worlds through finely crafted ceramic and metal objects of striking realism and visual sophistication in this standard setting work an international multidisciplinary team of scholars who are at the forefront of moche research present a state of the art overview of moche culture the contributors address various issues of moche society religion and material culture based on multiple lines of evidence and methodologies including iconographic studies archaeological investigations and forensic analyses some of the articles present the results of long term studies of major issues in moche iconography while others focus on more specifically defined topics such as site studies the influence of el niño southern oscillation on moche society the nature of moche warfare and sacrifice and the role of moche visual culture in decoding social and political frameworks this international volume draws together key research that examines visual arts of the past and contemporary indigenous societies placing each art style in its temporal and geographic context the contributors show how depictions represent social mechanisms of identity construction and how stylistic differences in product and process serve to reinforce cultural identity examples stretch from the paleolithic to contemporary world and include rock art body art and portable arts ethnographic studies of contemporary art production and use such as among contemporary aboriginal groups are included to help illuminate artistic practices and meanings in the past the volume reflects the diversity of approaches used by archaeologists to incorporate visual arts into their analysis of past cultures and should be of great value to archaeologists anthropologists and art historians sponsored by the world archaeological congress how can archaeologists interpret ancient art and images if they do not treat them as symbols or signifiers of identity traditional approaches to the archaeology of art have borrowed from the history of art and the anthropology of art by focusing on iconography meaning communication and identity this puts the archaeology of art at a disadvantage as an understanding of iconography and meaning requires a detailed knowledge of historical or ethnographic context unavailable to many archaeologists rather than playing to archaeology's weaknesses the authors argue that an archaeology of art should instead play to archaeology's strength the material character of archaeological evidence using case studies examining rock art figurines beadwork murals coffin decorations sculpture and architecture from europe the americas asia australia and north africa the authors develop an understanding of the affective and effective nature of ancient art and imagery an analysis of a series of material based practices from gesture and improvisation to miniaturisation and gigantism assembly and disassembly and the use of distinctions in colour enable key concepts such as style and meaning to be re imagined as affective practices recasting the archaeology of art as the study of affects offers a new prospectus for the study of ancient art and imagery this book draws on the complementary fields of visual cultural studies and interpretative archaeology to examine how successive generations transformed their visual culture to construct themselves it explores this process through an extended case study of art and social life in prehistoric south east italy between the upper palaeolithic and the bronze age a central argument of the book is that a wide range of visually communicative artworks were consumed and produced in the cultural process such objects range from portable artefacts to installations within sites to monumental structures in the landscape all of which were interwoven with people's bodies in the experiences of daily life and special performances more specifically it is argued that these powerful aesthetic objects were actively used by people across space and time to perceive the world around them and to reproduce their social lives they helped people to establish personal and collective boundaries identities and relationships to acquire and exercise power to promote ideologies and to contest them especially at time of social tension theorizing archaeological museum studies works towards reconnecting archaeological practice the theoretical richness of archaeology and museum studies the book therefore embraces both the practical aspects of archaeology and empirical studies in museums in order to rethink what happens when an artefact changes into an exhibit this study is positioned at the intersection of both history and archaeological theory and of the history of art and museum studies the central focus of this book explores the relationship between museums and their dominant paradigms on the one hand and new approaches and theories in archaeology on the other it thus also illustrates the co dependencies relations and tensions that characterize the relationship between academia and museums this book demonstrates how in becoming exhibits artefacts have and continue to become reflections of the discipline's prevailing paradigms while manifesting the dominant aims and methods of knowledge production pertaining at a given time and place as well as the desired social interpretations and modes of presenting the past theorizing archaeological museum studies offers important insights for academics and students archaeology heritage studies museum studies as well as for practitioners museum employees heritage practitioners the book is also intended for scholars from across the humanities interested in museum studies heritage studies curatorial studies cultural studies cultural geography material culture history of archaeology archaeological theory and the anthropology of things
