melinda a roberts and david t wasserman 1 purpose of this collection what are our obligations with respect to persons who have not yet and may not ever come into existence few of us believe that we can wrong those whom we leave out of existence altogether that is merely possible persons we may think as well that the directive to be fruitful and multiply and replenish the earth 1 does not hold up to close scrutiny how can it be wrong to decline to bring ever more people into existence at the same time we think we are clearly obligated to treat future persons persons who don t yet but will exist in accordance with certain stringent standards bringing a person into an existence that is truly awful not worth having can be wrong and so can bringing a person into an existence that is worth having when we had the alternative of bringing that some person into an existence that is substantially better we may think as well that our obligations with respect to future persons are triggered well before the point at which those persons commence their existence we think it would be wrong for example to choose today to turn the earth of the future into a miserable place even if the victims of that choice do not yet exist
