the empowerment of the learner to cope with changes and challenges brought about by metacapitalism is discussed in two classroom research projects the university of Hanover project deals with subjective theories of teachers and learners on portfolio self assessment at the tertiary level of language learning which should be seen against the background of the European Language Portfolio the overall evaluation is positive and recommends the portfolio as a tool to bridge learning teaching and assessment the university of Wollongong project Australia reveals culture specific aspects and beliefs on language learning and teaching which are determined by multiculturalism and challenged by multiliteracies including electronic literacy to be developed by staff and students

many universities in the UK USA Canada Australia and New Zealand have come to rely heavily on the fees received from postgraduate research students who come from non-English speaking backgrounds. These students make huge adaptations to another language, an alien culture and a different tradition of learning. They may suffer acute loneliness, confusion about cultural norms in the host country and in consequence their study may suffer.

Chapters address a full range of critical topics including the context and process of academic writing, needs analysis, teaching approaches, the interrelationship between writing and vocabulary, intercultural perspectives, feedback and assessment. Each chapter includes classroom implications, tasks and techniques for teaching and some possible exercises to use with students. Chapters begin with thought-provoking questions and end with a section designed to help users consider their own beliefs and classroom practices. Back cover.

A concern for quality and the growing number of international students have made the assessment of English for academic purposes a prime concern in British universities. By drawing on the expertise of Balep and many EAP specialists, this collection describes and critically evaluates current issues and debates in the field. An introduction provides an overview of the state of assessment in EAP and this is followed by sections which investigate in depth individual issues such as the validity of commonly used tests, the utility of computer test batteries and other non-traditional forms of assessment. Also addressed with original research data are the varying requirements of individual departments, students' views of assessment and self-assessment instruments. These issues are relevant beyond the individual circumstances of British universities and should inform good practice not only in the UK but anywhere where students receive part or all of their education in English as a second or foreign language.

Over 2.7m students study in a country other than their own. Most of those students come from the Asia Pacific region and undertake study in universities in the developed world. This trend is predicted to grow exponentially but features many dilemmas in the post-9/11 global environment. International students experience hostility and harassment as well as ambivalence about their value to the academy. Some live an uncertain life of poverty and alienation. Many also struggle to come to terms with living and studying in a foreign land where there are concerns about international students eroding academic standards, having poor English language proficiency and being unable to integrate and contribute to their new communities but some also seek to make new homes in their host countries the contributions in this book explore the complex and diverse aspects of transnational education and propose some pragmatic approaches to these dilemmas these contributions explore new ways of looking at the phenomena of international students their social and cultural needs as well as the challenges for teaching and learning research supervision and english language in the academy the book presents case studies and documents initiatives that are positive responses to the dilemmas of global student mobility
