Providing a distillation of knowledge in the various disciplines of arts education—dance, drama, music, literature, and poetry, and visual arts—the handbook synthesizes existing research literature, helps define the past, and contributes to shaping the substantive and methodological future of the respective and integrated disciplines of arts education. While research can at times seem distant from practice, the handbook aims to maintain connection with the lived practice of art and of education, capturing the vibrancy and best thinking in the field. The handbook is organized into 13 sections, each centering on a major area or issue in arts education research. These areas include history of arts education, curriculum, evaluation, cultural centers, appreciation, composition, informal learning, child culture, creativity, the body, spirituality, and technology. The individual chapters address cross-cultural research related to the central theme of the section from the perspectives of the particular arts discipline. Interludes provide reflective thoughts on the theme.

The Artful Species explores the idea that our aesthetic responses and art behaviors are connected to our evolved human nature. Our humanoid forerunners displayed aesthetic sensibilities hundreds of thousands of years ago, and the art standing of prehistoric cave paintings is virtually uncontested. In Part One, Stephen Davies analyses the key concepts of the aesthetic art and evolution and explores how they might be related. He considers a range of issues, including whether animals have aesthetic tastes and whether art is not only universal but cross-culturally comprehensible. Part Two examines the many aesthetic interests humans take in animals and how these reflect our biological interests and the idea that our environmental and landscape preferences are rooted in the experiences of our distant ancestors. In considering the controversial subject of human beauty, evolutionary psychologists have traditionally focused on female physical attractiveness in the context of mate selection, but Davies presents a broader view which decouples human beauty from mate choice and explains why it goes more with social performance and self presentation part three asks if the arts together or singly are biological adaptations incidental byproducts of nonartadaptations or so removed from biology that they rate as purely cultural technologies davies does not conclusively support any one of the many positions considered here but argues that there are grounds nevertheless for seeing art as part of human nature art serves as a powerful and complex signal of human fitness and so cannot be incidental to biology indeed aesthetic responses and art behaviors are the touchstones of our humanity
