reprint of the original first published in 1883

this book is the first full length study of apes and monkeys on the early modern stage it broadens the scope of existing scholarship by situating the apes glimpsed in shakespeare s plays in the wider context of the many uncelebrated uses by other playwrights c 1603 1659 the book investigates the theatrical appearances of real monkeys actors dressed up as apes and characters mistaken for them arguing that the ape trope is so insistent in early modern drama that it becomes a structural metaphor it addresses both plays and masques across the period arguing that the ways of seeing in these different kinds of theatre make apes mean differently in their generic contexts grounded in historicist readings this book also draws significantly on the field of ritual studies and the new intersectional discipline of animal performance studies how did early modern societies think about disasters such as earthquakes or floods how did they represent disaster and how did they intervene to mitigate its destructive effects this collection showcases the breadth of new work on the period ca 1300 1750 covering topics that range from new thinking about risk and securitisation to the protection of dikes from shipworm and with a geography that extends from europe to spanish america the volume places early modern disaster studies squarely at the intersection of intellectual cultural and socio economic history this period witnessed fresh speculation on nature the diffusion of disaster narratives and imagery and unprecedented attempts to control the physical world the book will be essential to specialists and students of environmental history and disaster as well as general readers who seek to discover how pre industrial societies addressed some of the same foundational issues we grapple with today
