a biography of muhammad the founder of islam the arabic muslim literature on muhammad s maghazi is bountiful since this book focuses on muhammad s maghazi a survey of this literature is important not only to establish the centrality of the topic in islamic thought but also to relay the uniqueness and contribution of this book to that end in this chapter i will first explore that which classical muslim narrators wrote on muhammad s maghazi and the ways they used the accounts to reflect allah s support for muhammad and the believers in the second section i will examine discussions by modern and contemporary muslims relaying how they interpret the accounts of the maghazi in particular i will discuss their articulation of the motivations and results of muhammad s military campaigns the first two sections of this chapter will thus establish the centrality of the maghazi as a literary genre as well as its importance among muslims past and present in the third section i take the discussion to non muslim scholarship i explore briefly early views on muhammad and his career by non muslims before i focus on works and arguments of key western scholars from the nineteenth century until our present day public interest in the religion of islam and in muslim communities in recent years has generated an impetus for western universities to establish an array of institutes and programs dedicated to the study of islam despite the growth in number of programs dedicated to this study very little attention has been paid to the appropriate shape of such programs and the assumptions that ought to underlie such a study the teaching and study of islam in western universities attempts to address two central questions that arise through the teaching of islam firstly what relation is there between the study of the religion of islam and the study of those cultures that have been shaped by that religion secondly what is the appropriate public role of a scholar of islam after extensive discussion of these questions the authors then continue to address the wider issues raised for the academic community having to negotiate between competing cultural and philosophical demands this edited collection provides new perspectives on the study of islam in western institutions and will be an invaluable resource for students of education and religion in particular islamic studies what makes a city an economic political and cultural center in the places where men pray together paul wheatley draws on two decades of astonishingly wide ranging research to demonstrate that islamic cities are defined by function rather than form by what they do rather than what they are focusing on the roles of cities during the first four centuries of islamic expansion wheatley explores interconnected cultural historical economic political and religious factors to provide the clearest and most extensively documented portrait of early islamic urban centers available to date building on the tenth century geographer al maqdisi s writings on urban centers of the islamic world buttressed by extensive comparative material from roadbooks topographies histories adab literatures and gazetteers of the time wheatley identifies the main functions of different islamic urban centers chapters on each of the thirteen centers that al maqdisi identified ranging from the atlantic to the indus and from the caspian to the sudan form the heart of this book in each case wheatley shows how specific agglomeration and accessibility factors combined to make every city functionally distinct as a creator of effective space he also demonstrates that far from revolutionizing every aspect of life in these cities the adoption of islam often affected the development of these cities less than previously existing local traditions the places where men pray together is a monumental work that will speak to scholars and readers across a broad variety of disciplines from historians anthropologists and sociologists to religious historians archaeologists and geographers
