first published in 2006 this is part of the literary criticism and cultural theory collection situated within the larger narrative of the symbiosis between photography and modern poetry in america during the 1930s each text examined by the author is a discrete object constituting a series of empirical statements expressing certain empirical truths particular to its time and place scholars have recently begun to study collections of byzantine historical excerpts as autonomous pieces of literature this book focuses on a series of minor collections that have received little or no scholarly attention including the epitome of the seventh century the excerpta anonymi tenth century the excerpta salmasiana eighth to eleventh centuries and the excerpta planudea thirteenth century three aspects of these texts are analysed in detail their method of redaction their literary structure and their cultural and political function combining codicological literary and political analyses this study contributes to a better understanding of the intertwining of knowledge and power and suggests that these collections of historical excerpts should be seen as a byzantine way of rewriting history the open access version of this book available at taylorfrancis.com/books/9780429351020 has been made available under a creative commons attribution non commercial no derivatives 4.0 license arabic grammatical thinking provides one of the richest and most significant contributions of medieval islamic sciences to the history of human civilization for the first time this book traces down its formation during the second century of islam eighth century a.d before the age of the famous halil b. ahmad and his disciple sibawayhi some 240 excerpts extracted from the earliest sources of the eighth and ninth centuries create a unique database which is then analyzed critically consequently a clear scheme emerges of the sophisticated grammar of this pre halilian era as a result halil's and sibawayhi's revolt on this tradition is considered in detail advocates of the established hypotheses on the origins of the synoptic gospels and their interrelationships the synoptic problem and especially those defending or contesting the existence of the source q are increasingly being called upon to justify their position with reference to ancient media practices still others go so far as to claim that ancient media realities force a radical rethinking of the whole project of synoptic source criticism and they question whether traditional documentary approaches remain valid at all this debate has been hampered to date by the patchy reception of research on ancient media in synoptic scholarship seeking to rectify this problem alan kirk here mounts a defense grounded in the practices of memory and manuscript transmission in the roman world of the two document hypothesis he shows how ancient media memory approaches in fact offer new leverage on classic research problems in scholarship on the synoptic gospels and that they have the potential to break the current impasse in the synoptic problem the results of his analysis open up new insights to the early reception and scribal transmission of the Jesus tradition and cast new light on some long conflicted questions in Christian origins

Douglas Hill is professor of music and horn at the University of Wisconsin at Madison as well as a past president of the International Horn Society and a respected teacher and clinician. The 27 chapters of collected thoughts cover topics ranging from getting started to preparing for college and professional auditions and include other subjects such as composing and improvising. There are seven chapters on repertoire that include reviews of music and texts that are the most comprehensive of any horn or other instrumental text to date. The process of learning and teaching is extremely insightful for everyone from the serious student to the most experienced instructor. This book is a must for anyone interested in the horn; it is invaluable.

Music informatics is an interdisciplinary research area that encompasses data-driven approaches to the analysis, generation, and retrieval of music in the era of big data. Two goals weigh heavily on many research agendas in this area: a) the identification of better features and b) the acquisition of better training data. To this end, researchers have started to incorporate findings and methods from music cognition, a related but historically distinct research area that is concerned with elucidating the underlying mental processes involved in music-related behavior.

A kaleidoscopic book that illuminates our obsession with weather as both physical reality and evocative metaphor, focusing on the ways in which it is perceived, feared, embraced, managed, and even marketed.
