how could the chinese communist party ccp not only survive but even thrive regaining the support of many chinese citizens after the tiananmen square crackdown of 1989 why has popular sentiment turned toward anti western nationalism despite the anti dictatorship democratic movements of the 1980s and why has china been more assertive toward the united states and japan in foreign policy but relatively conciliatory toward smaller countries in conflict offering an explanation for these unexpected trends zheng wang follows the communist government's ideological reeducation of the public which relentlessly portrays china as the victim of foreign imperialist bullying during the one hundred years of humiliation by concentrating on the telling and teaching of history in today's china wang illuminates the thinking of the young patriots who will lead this rising power in the twenty first century wang visits china's primary schools and memory sites and reads its history textbooks arguing that china's rise should not be viewed through a single lens such as economics or military growth but from a more comprehensive perspective that takes national identity and domestic discourse into account since it is the prime raw material for constructing China's national identity historical memory is the key to unlocking the inner mystery of the Chinese from this vantage point Wang tracks the CCP's use of history education to glorify the party reestablish its legitimacy consolidate national identity and justify one party rule in the post Tiananmen and post-Cold War era the institutionalization of this manipulated historical consciousness now directs political discourse and foreign policy and Wang demonstrates its important role in China's rise china is fast becoming the next superpower a rise that presents a challenge to the world economically politically and culturally drawing on extensive new chinese sources professor callahan sheds fascinating light on how chinese people understand their changing place and what that might mean for the world digital surveillance is a daily and all encompassing reality of life in china this book explores how chinese citizens make sense of digital surveillance and live with it it investigates their imaginaries about surveillance and privacy from within the chinese socio political system based on in depth qualitative research interviews detailed diary notes and extensive documentation ariane ollier malaterre attempts to de westernise the internet and surveillance literature she shows how the research participants weave a cohesive system of anguishing narratives on china s moral shortcomings and redeeming narratives on the government and technology as civilising forces although many participants cast digital surveillance as indispensable in china their misgivings objections and the mental tactics they employ to dissociate themselves from surveillance convey the mental and emotional weight associated with such surveillance exposure the book is intended for academics and students in internet surveillance and chinese studies and those working on china in disciplines such as sociology anthropology social psychology psychology communication computer sciences contemporary history and political sciences the lay public interested in the implications of technology in daily life or in contemporary china will find it accessible as it synthesises the work of sinologists and offers many interview excerpts
