despite the fact that interventional radiology is steadily moving toward a clinical specialty with the need for broad medical training daily craftsmanship will always remain fundamental to what an interventional radiologist does without basic catheter and wire skills ir would not be what it is today when i watch experienced colleagues work i am always surprised to see that concerning the technique and the materials we all make the same choices there is apparently a common ir skill which is universal and can be learned with experience i always see this with new ir fellows that it takes time to step away from improvising and letting the procedure take the lead to logic and standardized control over a procedure choosing the right materials for the right job and building a level of confidence with these materials is a very important part of any ir fellowship why can a supervisor get a stable catheter position with a new wire in no time whereas the fellow almost gives up the difference is knowing your materials for this specific indication and combining routine and standardized operational procedures hands on workshops are always very popular at every ir meeting because one can really learn about basic skills lectures with the title how i do it can always count on a full audience the oxford handbook of the history of physics brings together cutting edge writing by more than twenty leading authorities on the history of physics from the seventeenth century to the present day by presenting a wide diversity of studies in a single volume it provides authoritative introductions to scholarly contributions that have tended to be dispersed in journals and books not easily accessible to the general reader while the core thread remains the theories and experimental practices of physics the handbook contains chapters on other dimensions that have their place in any rounded history these include the role of lecturing and textbooks in the communication of knowledge the contribution of instrument makers and instrument making companies in providing for the needs of both research and lecture demonstrations and the growing importance of the many interfaces between academic physics industry and the military
