a nuanced take on how carceral expansions are changing labor and social life in carceral citizens anthropologist caroline m parker offers an ethnographic portrait of therapeutic communities in puerto rico the oldest colony in the americas as nonprofits nested within the carceral state therapeutic communities serve as reeducation and recovery centers for the mostly male drug offenders who serve out their sentences engaged in manual labor and prayer the most surprising aspect of these centers however is that their graduates often remain long after the completion of their term working as self appointed peer counselors in a mixture of volunteer and low wage positions parker seeks to explain this dynamic by showing how in these therapeutic communities criminalized men find new and meaningful ways of living in the shadow of the prison through their participation in the day to day functioning of the centers they discover and cultivate alternative forms of belonging livelihood and citizenship despite living within the restrictions of the carceral state situating her study against the backdrop of puerto rico s colonial history and with findings that extend across latin america parker challenges common assumptions about confinement labor and rehabilitation by delving into lives shaped by the convergence of imperialism the carceral state and self help she offers a fresh understanding of the transformations of labor and social life brought about by mass incarceration this book traces the historical development of the world history course as it has been taught in high school classrooms in texas a populous and nationally influential state over the last hundred years arguing that the course is a result of a patchwork of competing groups and ideas that have intersected over the past century with each new framework patched over but never completely erased or replaced the author crucially examines themes of imperialism eurocentrism and nationalism in both textbooks and the curriculum more broadly the first part of the book presents an overview of the world history course supported by numerical analysis of textbook content and public documents while the second focuses on the depiction of non western peoples and persistent narratives of eurocentrism and nationalism it ultimately offers that a more global accurate and balanced curriculum is possible despite the tension between the ideas of professional world historians who often de center the nation state in their quest for a truly global approach to the subject and the historical core rationale of state sponsored education in the united states to produce loyal citizens offering a new conceptual understanding of how colonial themes in world history curriculum have been dealt with in the past and are now engaged with in contemporary times it provides essential context for scholars and educators with interests in the history of education curriculum studies and the teaching of world history in the united states
