an exploration of how british society experienced spy fever during the first world war following the declaration of war in 1914 german spies were sighted across britain as a potent form of spy fever supposedly gripped the nation this book questions the extent to which british society was truly terrified of german spies and explores the broader impacts of secret warfare during the early stages of the first world war harry richards analyses the belief that a clandestine network of spies and saboteurs mostly comprised of naturalised aliens domiciled in britain had successfully infiltrated all elements of society and were poised to destroy britain s war effort from within although that danger never fully materialised the spy peril remained a dominant feature of radical politics and popular culture throughout the first world war why images of german spies were so appealing and enduring during this period is the subject of this book british spy fever in the first world war contends that our understanding of spy fever is in need of significant revision whereas previous studies typically characterise society s reaction to the spy peril as one of hysteria this book shows that our understanding of spy fever should encompass a wider variety of emotions and experiences british society was certainly obsessed with images of german espionage but this seldom resulted in psychological disorder each chapter therefore examines different emotional essay from the year 2017 in the subject history miscellaneous university of calcutta indian statistical institute course masters language english abstract this essay is about using a semiotic angle to evaluate the existence and activities of a soldier and a revolutionary in a stratified manner the most common definitional difference between a soldier and a revolutionary is that a soldier is a person who serves in an army and obeys orders given to him by a government and a revolutionary is someone who is involved in causing a complete or dramatic change in a society country or in the international sphere my concern here is the projection of a soldier who is a part of a national government and a revolutionary in both national and international sphere the word soldier is used almost unanimously in a positive sense but the word revolutionary is used in both positive and negative sense the reason is a soldier is always on the government s side whereas a revolutionary stands against the government i am not here taking into account the notion of government in exile as i am here dealing with a country s electorally elected government and a government in exile is also a revolutionary government or organization and it stands on the opposite side of an electorally elected government
