freud s discovery of the dynamic unconscious is arguably his most important contribution to our understanding of the human mind while others before him had realised that not all mental activity is conscious it was freud s aim to study in detail both the content and the alien mode of thinking of the unconscious mind dreams burst upon us playing enigmatically upon our inner theatre dense with obscure meaning freud showed the continuity between dreams puzzling neurotic and psychotic symptoms slips of the tongue and a multitude of errors which reveal the existence of the unconscious mind the author explains that while we may have illusions of autonomy and conscious awareness of our motivations psychoanalysis reveals that we are often lived by the unconscious which dwells within largely hidden during daylight but revealing its controlling influence within the dramas of sleep immensely creative yet powerfully destructive the unconscious can be a source of guidance as well as subversion evoking both awe and dread there are a number of recent texts that draw on psychoanalytic theory as an interpretative approach for understanding architecture or that use the formal and social logics of architecture for understanding the psyche but there remains work to be done in bringing what largely amounts to a series of independent voices into a discourse that is greater than the sum of its parts in the way that say the architect peter eisenman was able to do with the architecture of deconstruction or that the historian manfredo tafuri was able to do with the marxist critique of architecture the discourse of the present volume focuses specifically for the first time on the subject of the unconscious in relation to the design perception and understanding of architecture it brings together an international group of contributors who provide informed and varied points of view on the role of the unconscious in architectural design and theory and in doing so expand architectural theory to unexplored areas enriching architecture in relation to the humanities the book explores how architecture engages dreams desires imagination memory and emotions how architecture can appeal to a broader scope of human experience and identity beginning by examining the historical development of the engagement of the unconscious in architectural discourse and the current and historical theoretical and practical intersections of architecture and psychoanalysis the volume also analyses the city and the urban condition this is one of the most stimulating of macintyre s early writings in which he distinguishes between the two uses of the freudian term unconscious the descriptive where freud is seen as offering a non causal description of psychological phenomena and the explanatory where he seems to be making correlations between crucial childhood events and adult behavior noting that the concept of the unconscious is one that has strongly captured the public mind macintyre seeks to discover what it means to assert the existence of the unconscious rather than assess the empirical grounds for such an assertion his explanation takes in the nature of psychological theory and the problems raised by our ordinary pre freudian view of the mind
