composition research consistently demonstrates that the social context of writing determines the majority of conventions any writer must observe still most universities organize the required first year composition course as if there were an intuitive set of general writing skills usable across academic and work world settings in college writing and beyond a new framework for university writing instruction anne beaufort reports on a longitudinal study comparing one student's experience in fyc in history in engineering and in his post college writing her data illuminate the struggle of college students to transfer what they learn about general writing from one context to another her findings suggest ultimately not that we must abolish fyc but that we must go beyond even genre theory in reconceiving it accordingly beaufort would argue that the fyc course should abandon its hope to teach a sort of general academic discourse and instead should systematically teach strategies of responding to contextual elements that impinge on the writing situation her data urge attention to issues of learning transfer and to developmentally sound linkages in writing instruction within and across disciplines beaufort advocates special attention to discourse community theory for its power to help students perceive and understand the context of writing changing the way we teach writing and resistance in the training of teaching assistants draws on eighteen case studies to illustrate the critical role writing plays in overcoming graduate student resistance to instruction facilitating change and developing professional identity sally barr ebest argues that teaching assistants in english must be actively engaged in the theory and practice underlying composition pedagogy in order to better understand how to alter the way they teach and why such change is necessary in illustrating the potential for change when the paradigm shift in composition is applied to graduate education ebest considers recent discussions of composition pedagogy post secondary teaching theories cognitive social cognitive and educational psychology and issues of gender voice and writing stemming from research conducted over a five year period this volume explores how a cross section of teaching assistants responded to pedagogy as students and how their acceptance of pedagogy affected their performance as instructors investigating reasons behind manifestations of resistance and necessary elements for overcoming it ebest finds that engagement in composition strategies reflective writing journaling drafting and active learning and restoration of feelings of self efficacy are the primary factors that facilitate change concerned with gender as it relates to personal construct changing the way we teach traces the influence of familial expectations and the effects of literacy experiences on students and draws correlations between feminist and composition pedagogy ebest asserts that the phenomena contributing to the development of a strong unified voice in women self knowledge empathy positive role models and mentors should be essential elements of a constructivist graduate curriculum to understand composition pedagogy and to convince students of its values ebest holds that educators must embrace it themselves and trace the effects through active research by providing graduate students with pedagogical sites for research and reflection faculty enable them to express their anger or fear study its sources and quite often write their way to a new understanding broad generalizations about people today are a familiar feature of first year student writing how students write brings a fresh perspective to this perennial observation using corpus linguistics techniques this study analyzes sentence level patterns in student writing to develop an understanding of how students present evidence draw connections between ideas relate to their readers and ultimately learn to construct knowledge in their writing drawing on both first year and upper level student writing the book examines the discourse of students at different points in their education it also distinguishes between argumentative and analytic essays to explore the way school genres and assignments shape students choices in focusing on sentence level features such as hedges perhaps and boosters definitely this study shows how such rhetorical choices work together to open or close opportunities for thoughtful exchanges of ideas attention to these features can help instructors foster civil discourse design effective assignments and expose and question norms of higher education in reconstructing response to student writing dan melzer makes the argument that writing instructors should shift the construct so that peer response and student self assessment are more central than teacher response presenting the results of a national study of teacher and peer response and student self assessment at institutions of higher education across the united states melzer analyzes teacher and peer response to over 1 000 pieces of student writing as well as 128 student portfolio reflection essays he draws on his analysis and on a comprehensive review of the literature on response to introduce a constructivist heuristic for response aimed at both composition instructors and instructors across disciplines melzer argues that teachers and researchers should focus less on teacher response to individual pieces of student writing and more on engaging in dialogue with student self assessment and peer response focusing on growth and transfer rather than products and grades reconstructing response to student writing especially when taken together with melzer s previous book assignments across the curriculum provides a comprehensive and large scale view of college writing and responding across the curriculum in the united states
