this book was originally published in 1935 for some years past the scientific study of primitive peoples has experimented in a variety of directions for new methods of investigation criticism of the comparative method of which sir james frazer is recognized as the foremost exponent all the world over has been directed mainly against the fragmentary character of its evidence when torn from its context in this book dr benedict offers an alternative method of approach the aim of the investigator she maintains should be the discovery in the diversity of cultures of the configuration of each that is the cultural drive in group and individual which determines the characteristic reaction to stimulus in any and every situation in life this world war ii era study paints an illuminating contrast between the culture of japan and that of the united states culture 1922 traces the intellectual and institutional deployment of the culture concept in england and america in the first half of the twentieth century with primary attention to how models of culture are created elaborated upon transformed resisted and ignored marc manganaro works across disciplinary lines to embrace literary literary critical and anthropological writing tracing two traditions of thinking about culture as elite products and pursuits and as common and shared systems of values manganaro argues that these modernist formulations are not mutually exclusive and have indeed intermingled in complex and interesting ways throughout the development of literary studies and anthropology beginning with the important victorian architects of culture matthew arnold and edward tylor the book follows a number of main figures schools and movements up to 1950 such as anthropologist franz boas his disciples edward sapir ruth benedict and zora neale hurston literary modernists t s eliot and james joyce functional anthropologist bronislaw malinowski modernist literary critic i a richards the new critics and kenneth burke the main focus here however is upon three works published in 1922 the watershed year of modernism eliot s the waste land malinowski s argonauts of the western pacific and joyce s ulysses manganaro reads these masterworks and the history of their reception as efforts toward defining culture this is a wide ranging and ambitious study about an ambiguous and complex concept as it moves within and between disciplines an international collection of influential texts on the concept of family and related issues with introductory chapters for each volume an anthropologist at work is the product of a long collaboration between ruth benedict and margaret mead mead who was benedict s student colleague and eventually her biographer here has collected the bulk of ruth benedict s writings this includes letters between these two seminal anthropologists correspondence with franz boas benedict s teacher edward sapir s poems and notes from studies that benedict had collected throughout her life since benedict wrote little mead has fleshed out the narratives by adding background information on benedict s life work and the cultural atmosphere of the time ruth benedict formed her own view of the contribution of anthropology before the first steps were taken in the study of how individual human beings with their given potentialities came to embody their culture in her later work she came to accept and sometimes to use the work in culture and personality that depended as much upon social psychology as upon cultural anthropology she came to recognize that society made up of persons or organized in groups was as important as a subject of study as the culture of a society this volume greatly enhanced by mead s contributions is a record of what was important to benedict in her life and work it is expertly ordered and assembled in a way that will be accessible to students and

traces the life of the great american anthropologist discusses her friendship with margaret mead and examines benedict's most important writings culture is a term we commonly use to explain the differences in our ways of living in this book michael a. elliot returns to the moment this usage was first articulated tracing the concept of culture to the writings of folktales, dialect literature, local color sketches, and ethnographies that provided its intellectual underpinnings in turn of the century america. the culture concept explains how this now familiar definition of culture emerged during the late nineteenth century through the intersection of two separate endeavors that shared a commitment to recording group-based difference: american literary realism and scientific ethnography. elliot looks at early works of cultural studies as diverse as the conjure tales of charles chesnutt, the ghost dance ethnography of james mooney, and the prose narrative of the omaha anthropologist-turned author francis la flesche. his reading of these works, which struggle to find appropriate theoretical and textual tools for articulating a less chauvinistic understanding of human difference, is at once a recovery of a lost connection between american literary realism and ethnography and a productive inquiry into the usefulness of the culture concept as a critical tool in our time and times to come.

this book argues that science fiction has been a key participant along with anthropology and literary theory in the interdisciplinary debates over culture and narrative form from the modernist period to the present. both science fiction and the anthropological ethnography in their modernist forms and post-modern/postcolonial reinventions are intertwined technologies for constructing culture and difference through narrative worldbuilding. this book traces the ways sf authors including ray bradbury, ursula k. le guin, and octavia e. butler, as well as indigenous futurists craig strete, celu amberstone, rebecca roanhorse, and chérie dimaline, have deployed, interrogated, and revised these models of culture, representation, and power to imagine new futures.
