research on migration and urban development in africa has primarily focused on larger cities and rural to urban migration however 97 percent of africa s urban centers have fewer than 300

000 inhabitants and a sizable share of urban migrants come from other urban areas a more holistic and dynamic perspective incorporating migration flows along the full urban hierarchy as well as urban urban migrants is needed to better understand and leverage migration for urban development migrants markets and mayors rising above the employment challenge in africa s secondary cities draws on demographic data research literature key informant interviews and empirical research to better understand how migrants in africa s secondary cities fare in urban labor markets how they affect aggregate urban productivity and how mayors can leverage migrants potential to the benefit of all it explores these questions across countries and four urban case settings jijiga in ethiopia jinja in uganda and jendouba and kairouan in tunisia although mayors in secondary cities often see migrants as a burden to their cities labor markets and a threat to development the report finds that migrants contribute increasingly less to urban population growth and that they usually strengthen the resident labor force the report also finds that labor market outcomes for migrants are at least as good as those for nonmigrants africa s secondary cities are well placed to leverage migration but evidence based policies are needed to manage the growth and development of land and labor markets the report reviews policy options that mayors can take to strengthen the financial technical and planning capacity of secondary cities and better leverage migration to benefit migrants and nonmigrants alike much of the literature on migration to cities examines migration in a nonspatial fashion or focuses on rural urban migration to the largest most visible cities this volume fills a gap by focusing on migration to secondary cities coming up with a compelling set of facts overall the volume is very well done and sets a benchmark for future research j vernon henderson school professor of economic geography london school of economics creating cities inclusive of immigrants in southern africa is both a balancing act and a protracted process that requires positive attitudes informed by accommodative institutional frameworks this book revolves around two key contemporary issues that cities around the globe are trying to achieve viz the need to build inclusive cities and the need to accommodate immigrants the search for building inclusive cities is an on going challenge which most cities are grappling with this challenge is complicated by the need to include immigrants who are always side lined by policies of host countries this book discusses the host immigrant interface by providing a detailed insight of anchors of inclusive cities and a holistic picture of who immigrants are these are then discussed contextually within the southern african region where insight into selected cities is provided to some depth using empirical evidence the discussion on inclusive cities and immigrants is a universal narrative targeting practitioners and students in town and regional planning urban studies urban politics migration and international relations the southern african region once more provides an opportunity to further interrogate and understand the dynamics of immigration in selected cities this book will also be of interest to policy makers dealing with challenges of inclusivity in the light of immigrants with critical issues like desegregation and funding facing our schools dissatisfaction with public education has reached a new high teachers decry inadequate resources while critics claim educators are more concerned with job security than effective teaching though urban education has reached crisis proportions contending players have difficulty agreeing on a common program of action this book tells why changing urban education confronts the prevailing naivete in school reform by examining the factors that shape reinforce or undermine reform efforts edited by one of the nation s leading urban scholars it examines forces for change and resistance in urban education and proposes that the barrier to reform can only be overcome by understanding how schools fit into the broader political contexts of their cities much of the problem with our schools lies with the reluctance of educators to recognize the profoundly political character of public education the contributors show how urban political contexts vary widely with factors like racial composition the role of the teachers union and relations between cities and surrounding metropolitan areas presenting case studies of original field research in baltimore chicago houston and six other urban areas they consider how resistance to desegregation and the concentration of the poor in central urban areas affect education and they suggest how cities can build support for reform through the involvement of business and other community players by demonstrating the complex interrelationship between urban education and politics this book shows schools to be not just places for educating children but also major employers and large spenders of tax dollars it also introduces the concept of civic capacity the ability of educators and non educators to work together on common goals and suggests that this key issue must be addressed before education can be improved changing urban education makes it clear to educators that the outcome of reform efforts depends heavily on their political context as it reminds political scientists that education is a major part of the urban mix while its prognosis is not entirely optimistic it sets forth important guidelines that cannot be ignored if our schools are to successfully prepare children for the future
