this monograph surveys the results of government intervention in the market for retirement income provision throughout the world the authors begin by looking at high income democracies in which governments have to a large degree taken over the function of providing pensions they find that state provision crowds out private provision and places a considerable fiscal burden on developed country governments this fiscal burden is then combined with complex regulatory systems that are imposed on the private sector and which make pensions incomprehensible furthermore as the authors show the ageing populations may make meaningful reform of government pensions programmes impossible as grey electors flex their muscles the authors find the same patterns in middle income and low income countries state pension systems are often found hand in hand with a lack of security partly because of the problems of corruption and inflation the state frequently does its best to crowd out private initiative but where they are allowed to families make provision for retirement in all sorts of ingenious ways the authors reject the world bank blueprint of formal structured pension systems they suggest instead that governments focus on ensuring that the legal and financial infrastructure exists to allow people to make proper provision for their retirement so called market failure will always ensure that the result is imperfect but by comparison government failure around the world has had catastrophic effects biofuels global emergence in the last two decades is met with increased concerns over climate change and sustainable development this report addresses the core issue of biofuel sustainability of biofuels and related feedstocks drawing from a wide range of sustainability related studies reports policy initiatives the report critically examines the economic environmental and social sustainability dimensions of biofuels and review the major certification initiatives schemes and regulations in doing so the report relies on extensive review of a number of country case studies covering a broad range of current biofuel feedstocks systems the report analysis clearly distinguish feedstock efficiency in terms of biofuel yields per unit of land from sustainability especially under limiting resource irrigated water or sensitive areas carbon stocks also long run economic viability depend on the future policy support technical innovations in biofuel systems economics of biofuel supply and demand and trade offs between food and energy uses as well as feedstock productivity gains biofuels can present both advantages and risks for environmental sustainability the latter being often difficult to measure or monitor and may conflict with economic sustainability unless great strides in productivity gains are achieved social sustainability is the weakest link in current biofuel certification schemes owing to intrinsic local factors and as efforts target more few negative social impacts much less focus is placed on inclusive processes that strengthen marginal stockholders participation and benefits biofuel certification schemes need to be more smallholder inclusive perhaps through policy initiatives finally poor developing countries especially with abundant land and biomass production potential need to prioritise food security and poverty reduction in many cases biofuel models that encourage small scale integrated bioenergy systems may offer higher rural development impacts fdi induced larger scale biofuel projects on the other hand may be suitable in those situations where countries have sufficient industrial capacity besides land and biomass potential and when these biofuel projects can be fully integrated into domestic energy strategies that do not conflict with food production potential and food security
