this significant text examines the factors both internal and external to the world bank that have influenced its urban development agenda and is essential reading for those involved in the areas of urban and development studies

this book addresses the legal issues raised by the interaction between human rights and development in contemporary international law in particular it charts the parameters of international law that states have to take into account in order to protect human rights in the process of development in doing so it departs from traditional analyses where human rights are mainly considered as a political dimension of development rather the book suggests focusing on human rights as a system of international norms establishing minimum standards of protection of individuals and minimum standards applicable in all circumstances on what is essential for a dignified existence the various dimensions covered in the book include the discourse on human rights and development interrelationship particularly opinio juris and the practice of states on the question the notion of international assistance and cooperation in human rights law under legal regimes such as international humanitarian law and emerging rules in the area of protection of persons in the event of disasters the extraterritorial scope of economic social and cultural rights treaties and legal principles on the respect for human rights in externally designed and planned development activities analysis of these topics sheds light on the question of whether international law as it stands today addresses most of the issues concerning the protection of human rights in the development process four studies explored patterns of language growth and processing in 64 19 31 month old bilingual children acquiring english and spanish in the first study cross sectional and longitudinal methods revealed significant relationships between vocabulary size and grammatical development replicating previous studies with monolingual children the compositions of children s lexicons in each language were linked to vocabulary size in that language with few exceptions utterance length and complexity and the emergence of closed class and predicate terms in each language were linked more closely to vocabulary size in the same language than to total conceptual vocabulary tcv size in the second study performance on english and spanish sentence repetition tests was compared for bilingual and monolingual children matched for vocabulary size in each language the performance of the bilingual children was similar to that of their monolingual controls indicating links between grammatical ability and vocabulary development within the same language the slightly better performance of the bilingual children on a few comparisons suggested some degree of cross linguistic bootstrapping in the third study event related potentials erps were used to investigate the neural activity of bilingual children as they processed known and unknown words there were differences in the timing and distribution of the erp amplitude differences to known vs unknown words for each language and differences in these effects when children with larger tcv sizes were compared to those with smaller tcv sizes these results thus replicated studies with monolingual children that found links between vocabulary development and the organization of erp effects although the exact patterns were different for the bilingual and monolingual children in the fourth study the effects of mixed vs blocked language testing conditions on erp patterns were investigated results indicated that some of the differences in erp effects between the monolingual and bilingual children noted in the third study may have been due to processing demands created by the mixed language testing condition in which the bilingual children were tested the results of these four studies support experience based accounts of early language acquisition and further establish the use of combined behavioral neural imaging approaches for studying language development in bilingual toddlers all recent books on international social work mention africa only briefly and few engage with the broader field of development studies this book focuses solely on the unique african context engaging with issues relating to social work and development more broadly thus enabling a deeper examination and more complex and nuanced picture to emerge unlike most academic works this book highlights multiple practitioner voices with authors or co authors that have recently been or are currently practising social workers as an edited book it draws from both academic research as well as lived practice experience supported by strong theoretical positioning and guidance in introductory chapters drawing on african literature wherever possible looking at case studies from lesotho botswana kenya zimbabwe ethiopia namibia uganda nigeria kenya south africa rwanda zambia and tanzania and covering established areas of practice such as child protection working with older people working with people with disabilities mental health and mainstream services targeting women as well as emerging areas of developmental social work practice such as humanitarian assistance in post conflict situations work with immigrants and refugees and the training of community based workers this book takes a future oriented perspective that aims to move beyond well worn critiques to envision constructive and sustainable futures for social work and social development in africa from a critical perspective
