the social credit movement had a broad and significant impact on the social and political history of alberta a number of authors have examined this phenomenon usually focusing on the economic and social conditions that influenced social credit s rise to power major douglas and alberta social credit ideology however is the first work dedicated expressly to the intellectual history of the social credit government of the 1930s and 1940s bob hesketh challenges us to revise previous thinking about social credit by placing new emphasis on the influence of major c h douglas s conspiracy based ideology on the aberhart and manning governments the author is the first to contend that douglas s beliefs were strongly influenced by the infamous anti semitic book the protocols of the learned elders of zion douglas believed that a jewish financial conspiracy with the single goal of enslaving mankind was orchestrating world events hesketh analyses the shared ground between douglas s conspiratorial thinking and the fundamentalism of aberhart and manning he suggests that both premiers understood and applied douglas s teachings to a wide variety of government policies from the famous monetary bills to numerous lesser known economic diversification initiatives this book develops important new interpretations of social credit s behaviour as a movement party and government providing an unprecedented focus on ideology it will be an essential reference for historians and political scientists concerned with the history of social credit in alberta environmental history has traditionally told the story of man and nature scholars have too frequently overlooked the ways in which their predominantly male subjects have themselves been shaped by gender seeing nature through gender here reintroduces gender as a meaningful category of analysis for environmental history showing how women s actions desires and choices have shaped the world and seeing men as gendered actors as well in thirteen essays that show how gendered ideas have shaped the ways in which people have represented experienced and consumed their world virginia scharff and her coauthors explore interactions between gender and environment in history ranging from colonial borderlands to transnational boundaries from mountaintop to marketplace they focus on historical representations of humans and nature on questions about consumption on environmental politics and on the complex reciprocal relations among human bodies and changing landscapes they also challenge the ecofeminist position by challenging the notion that men and women are essentially different creatures with biologically different destinies each article shows how a person or group of people in history have understood nature in gendered terms and acted accordingly often with dire consequences for other people and organisms here are considerations of the ways we study sexuality among birds of william byrd s masking sexual encounters in his account of an eighteenth century expedition of how the ecology of fire in a changing built environment has reshaped firefighters own gendered identities some are playful as in a piece on the evolution of snow bunnies to shred bunnies others are dead serious as in a chilling portrait of how endocrine disrupters are reinventing humans animals and water systems from the cellular level out aiding and adding significantly to the enterprise of environmental history seeing nature through gender bridges gender history and environmental history in unexpected ways to show us how the natural world can remake the gendered patterns we've engraved on ourselves and on the planet air pollution challenges nations sharing common borders to balance economic needs with protecting citizens and the environment across jurisdictions by examining landmark cases on the two borders john wirth shows how environmental diplomacy citizen action at the grassroots level and the role of science industry and the law converged bringing canada the united states and mexico to the threshold of today's continental approaches to pollutant pathways wirth first examines the famous trail smelter conflict of 1927-1941 this precedent setting case which pitted u.s. farmers against the canadian smelter resulted in the doctrine that in cases of transborder damage the polluter must pay although the farmers were modestly compensated and the british columbia based smelter cooperated to control pollution wirth reveals the real significance of the decision u.s. industries shared with the canadians a common interest to resolve the case in a manner that would allow them to continue to pollute freely across international borders with minimal regulation wirth then turns to the gray triangle confrontations of the 1980s in which the new instruments of the clean air act and cooperative policies developed by the mexican and u.s. governments established an entirely new climate for citizen action resulting in the closing of an american smelter in arizona and the imposition of stricter standards on two mexican smelters in sonora although the trail precedent favored industry the gray triangle resolution signaled that the needs of industry and the public interest were now in better balance drawing on extensive interviews and previously untapped archives smelter smoke in north america provides new analysis of the development of a north american institutional response to continental air pollution it chronicles how industry developed a continental perspective in a shared regional space the mineralized west and how successful efforts of governments and citizens to protect the environment evolved
