to be human means to resist dehumanization in the darkest periods of human history men and women have risen up and in many different voices said this one thing do not treat me like this treat me like the human being that i am claiming her dignity explores a number of stories from the old testament in which women in a variety of creative ways resist the violence of war rape heterarchy and poverty amid the life denying circumstances that seek to attack violate and destroy the bodies and psyches of women men and children the women featured in this book absolutely refuse to succumb to the explicit and at times subtle but no less harmful manifestations of violence that they face using the term prophetic remembrance to articulate the expression of a constituent faith in the performative capacity of language erica still shows how black subjectivity is born of and interprets cultural trauma she brings together african american neo slave narratives and black south african postapartheid narratives to reveal the processes by which black subjectivity accounts for its traumatic origins names the therapeutic work of the present and inscribes the possibility of the future the author draws on trauma studies black theology and literary criticism as she considers how writers such as toni morrison charles johnson john edgar wideman david bradley sindiwe magona k sello duiker and zakes mda explore the possibilities for rehearsing a traumatic past without being overcome by it although both african american and south african literary studies have addressed questions of memory narrative and trauma little comparative work has been done prophetic remembrance offers this comparative focus in reading these literatures together to address the question of what it means to remember and to recover from racial oppression
