seminar paper from the year 2004 in the subject american studies culture and applied geography grade 1 2 a university of potsdam anglistics american studies course america in war and peace jazz age to world war ii language english abstract after the civil war many southerners were dissatisfied with their situation the lost war and the fact that many existences were destroyed due to the collapse of the southern economy stirred the anger among many of them the abolition of slavery that was forced upon them and which until then was the basis of their economic prosperity was the more serious this discontent then changed to hate towards the former slaves many former slave holders came together and formed what became known as the first ku klux klan an organization that tried to overthrow the system and to return to the old one by lynching and intimidating black citizens this dark chapter of american history should not remain the only one after the disappearance of the first ku klux klan partly because of the passing of the ku klux klan acts of 1870 racial frictions played a minor role although they never completely disappeared in the following decades the american people were especially at the end of the century concerned with the ongoing industrialization and development of the country world war i even saw the involvement of african americans in the service it was not until the end of the war and the end of all war enthusiasm that americans were confronted with the legacy of the civil war outcomes the racial turmoil of the post war era led to the re emergence of the ku klux klan generally referred to as the second klan although similar in its basic principles the two organizations had different ideas altogether one major difference was the foundation of a female branch of the ku klux klan the women of the ku klux klan gender oppression has been a feature of war and conflict throughout human history yet until fairly recently little attention was devoted to addressing the consequences of violence and discrimination experienced by women in post conflict states thankfully that is changing today in a variety of post conflict settings the former yugoslavia afghanistan colombia northern ireland international advocates for women s rights have focused bringing issues of sexual violence discrimination and exclusion into peace making processes in on the frontlines fionnuala ni aolain dina francesca haynes and naomi cahn consider such policies in a range of cases and assess the extent to which they have had success in improving women s lives they argue that there has been too little success and that this is in part a product of a focus on schematic policies like straightforward political incorporation rather than a broader and deeper attempt to alter the cultures and societies that are at the root of much of the violence and exclusions experienced by women they contend that this broader approach would not just benefit women however gender mainstreaming and increased gender equality has a direct correlation with state stability and functions to preclude further conflict if we are to have any success in stabilizing failing states gender needs to move to fore of our efforts with this in mind they examine the efforts of transnational organizations states and civil society in multiple jurisdictions to place gender at the forefront of all post conflict processes they offer concrete analysis and practical solutions to ensuring gender centrality in all aspects of peace making and peace enforcement
