the current study argues that different cultures can coexist better today if we focus not only on what separates them but also on what connects them to do so the author discusses how both aristotle and confucius see rhetoric as a mode of thinking that is indispensable to the human understanding of the truths of things or dao the way or how both see the human understanding of the truths of things or dao the way as necessarily communal open ended and discursive based on this similarity the author aims to develop a more nuanced understanding of differences to help foster better cross cultural communication in making the argument she critically examines two stereotyped views that aristotle s concept of essence or truth is too static to be relevant to the rhetorical focus on the realm of human affairs and that confucius concept of dao the way is too decentered to be compatible with the inferential discursive thinking in addition the author relies primarily on the interpretations of the analects by two 20th century chinese confucians to supplement the overreliance on renderings of the analects in recent comparative rhetorical scholarship the study shows that we need an in depth understanding of both the other and the self to comprehend the relation between the two the studies of rhetoric and literature have been closely connected on the theoretical level ever since antiquity and many great works of literature were written by men and women who were well versed in rhetoric it is therefore well worth investigating exactly what these writers knew about rhetoric and how the practice of literary criticism has been enriched through rhetorical knowledge the essays reprinted here have been arranged chronologically with two essays selected for each of six major periods antiquity the middle ages the renaissance including shakespeare the 17th century the 18th century and the 19th and 20th centuries some are more theoretically oriented whereas others become exercises in practical criticism some cover well trod ground whereas others turn to parts of the rhetorical tradition that are often overlooked scholars in the field should benefit from having this material collected together and reprinted in one volume but the essays included here will also be useful to graduate students and advanced undergraduates for course work and general reading students of rhetoric seeking to understand how the principles of their field extend into other forms of communication will find this volume of interest as will students of literature seeking to refine their understanding of the various modes of literary criticism
