scenario is played out again and again in hospitals across the country this in depth behind the scene s account of a healthcare system under stress and the declining quality of medical treatment in america should serve as a wakeup call to the public faye satterly a registered nurse with over two decades of experience spells out the alarming statistics the average nurse today is forty five years old and anticipating retirement only 12 percent of nurses are under age thirty at the same time nursing schools report decreasing enrollments and fewer graduates the result is that the nurses who are on the front lines of healthcare are feeling overwhelmed and leaving the field for less stressful opportunities outside hospital settings compounding the looming crisis is the fact that just as nurses are becoming scarce the need for them is becoming ever greater over the next decade aging baby boomers will swell the ranks of the over fifty five population a group that experiences higher healthcare needs than those in their thirties and forties there are answers the author insists but they will require an honest public debate about our choices and expectations what are we willing to do and how much are we willing to pay for safe effective delivery of healthcare this fascinating and disturbing account by a veteran nurse with extensive experience is a compelling call for action to counter the nursing shortage and ensure that caring regains its premium status in healthcare

this paper presents a simple new method for estimating the size of wealth effects on aggregate consumption the method exploits the well documented sluggishness of consumption growth often interpreted as habits in the asset pricing literature to distinguish between short run and long run wealth effects in us data we estimate that the immediate next quarter marginal propensity to consume from a 1 change in housing wealth is about 2 cents with a final long run effect around 9 cents consistent with several recent studies we find a housing wealth effect that is substantially larger than the stock wealth effect we believe that our approach is preferable to the currently popular cointegration based estimation methods because neither theory nor evidence justifies faith in the existence of a stable cointegrating vector
