biblical apocalyptic texts that make imminent predictions of the end of the world as we know it have fascinated christians from the earliest times understandably over the centuries such texts have been interpreted in a variety of different even opposing ways this is particularly so in twentieth century biblical exegesis many authors would hold that apocalyptic texts far from truly predicting the end of time final resurrection universal judgement and perpetual separation of just and wicked are to be seen as merely existential or performative expressions of the sinner s radical dependence on a sovereign divinity any kind of literal interpretation of apocalyptic predictions therefore would seem to involve insoluble problems of a scientific ethical and social kind that modern society cannot envisage in this extensive biblical study prof o callaghan considers in detail not only the eschatology present in apocalyptic works in general and the complex debate on new testament eschatology that flourished throughout the last century he has also shown that the powerful apocalyptic message present in the new testament is essentially an application and direct consequence of jesus christ s saving work among humans principally on the basis of a narrative analysis of matthew s christology apocalyptic motifs abound in the first gospel he shows that new testament apocalyptic as it stands while radical challenging and theologically stimulating is neither irrational nor ethically untenable and this for the simple reason that the judge who will come at the end of time to save the just and condemn sinners is one and the same jesus of nazareth who has already offered the gift of salvation to the whole of humankind
