the federal role in the management of nonfederal u s forests was once relatively simple to assist in the prevention and control of wildfires the administrative structure to carry out this role was similarly uncomplicated with most programs under the aegis of the u s department of agriculture in recent years however both the management and administrative landscapes have changed dramatically responsibility for the federal role in nonfederal forests has been expanded to include a number of cabinet departments and independent agencies which must address critical issues such as reforestation wetlands disruption and biodiversity protection with two thirds of all u s forests on nonfederal lands these issues are becoming increasingly more important now a first of its kind examination of the federal role in nonfederal forest management forested landscapes in perspective presents a comprehensive look at the current landscape and recommends improvements that best serve public and private interests this timely volume includes an insightful description of the current situation and recent trends followed by a thorough examination of major policy and program issues affecting nonfederal forests among these are emerging environmental concerns such as forest fragmentation and large scale climate change as well as issues of economic importance such as the availability of timber supplies the global energy and water cycle experiment gewex panel of the national research council nrc was tasked by the u s global change research program usgcrp to provide a rapid and succinct assessment to relevant agencies on the general merit of the gewex america prediction project gapp as well as the coordinated enhanced observing period ceop in addition the panel was asked to provide guidance to the agencies on the relationships between the agencies newly proposed hydrologic research activities gapp and ceop providing this guidance is critical in part because the federal agencies tend to have somewhat differing priorities across the wide span of gewex activities
