many emergency admissions to hospital are avoidable and many patients stay in hospital longer than is necessary improving the flow of patients through the system will be critical to the NHS's ability to cope with future winter pressures on urgent and emergency care services at a time when NHS budgets are under significant pressure. The number of emergency admissions to hospitals is continuing to rise albeit at a slower rate than in the past. More patients attending major A&E departments are now being admitted to hospital. In 2012/13 over a quarter of all patients attending major A&E departments were admitted up from 19 per cent in 2003/04. The rise in emergency admissions is dominated by patients who stay less than two days. Short stay in hospital. The main factors behind the increase in emergency admissions include the slowness with which the NHS has developed effective alternatives to admission to hospital. There are many local initiatives to prevent avoidable emergency admissions but limited evidence on what works. A lack of alignment between hospitals and community and local services in the hours they are open compromises efforts to avoid out of hours hospital admissions and prolongs the length of stay of inpatients. Among the NAO's recommendations is the need for both short and long term strategies to address staffing shortages in A&E. The Department and NHS England should also address barriers to seven day working in hospitals such as the consultants contract which gives consultants the right to refuse to work outside 7am to 7pm Monday to Friday.

Each year disasters such as house fires, car accidents, tsunamis, earthquakes and hurricanes impact hundreds of thousands of children. Child victims can suffer disproportionately and the physical and psychological damage sustained can far outweigh the same effects in adults, often requiring years of therapy. Sadly, emergency planners to date have the last third of the 19th century witnessed a considerable increase in the active participation of women in the various Christian missions. Katharina Stornig focusses on the Catholic case and particularly explores the activities and experiences of German missionary nuns, the so-called servants of the Holy Spirit, in colonial Togo and New Guinea in the late 19th and first half of the 20th centuries. Introducing the nuns' ambiguous roles as travelers, evangelists, believers, domestic workers, farmers, teachers and nurses, Stornig highlights the ways in which these women shaped and were shaped by the missionary encounter and how they affected colonial societies. More generally, privileging the sources produced by nuns, i.e. letters, chronicles and reports, and emphasizing their activities, Sisters Crossing Boundaries profoundly challenges the frequent depiction of women and particularly nuns as the largely passive observers of the missionizing and colonizing activities of men. Stornig does not stop at adding women to the existing historical narrative of mission in Togo and New Guinea but presents the hopes and strategies that German nuns related to the imagination and practice of empire. She also discusses the effects of boundary crossing, both real and imagined, in the context of religion, gender and race.

The JEE team would like to express its appreciation to the Republic of Uzbekistan for volunteering for a joint external evaluation. This act shows high levels of commitment, foresight and leadership at senior levels of government that will be critical to success in building and maintaining Uzbekistan's core capacities under the international health regulations.

Originally published in 1984, Natural Disasters shows how misleading the term natural disaster can be. Forces of nature such as earthquakes, cyclones and extreme variations in weather can trigger disasters, but in many third world countries it is environmental degradation, poverty and rapid population growth which turn a natural hazard into a major disaster. This book questions whether the rich nations' usual response to disaster – fast, short-lived emergency assistance – is any longer adequate. Today, most major disasters are development gone wrong: development which puts millions of poor people on the margins of existence. Disaster relief alone is like bandaging a rapidly growing wound. The appropriate response must include an element of true development development which reduces rather than increases vulnerability to disasters
