jacqueline best argues that the 1990s changes in imf world bank and donor policies towards what some have called the post washington consensus were driven by an erosion of expert authority and an increasing preoccupation with policy failure failures such as the asian financial crisis and the decades of despair in sub saharan africa led these institutions to develop governance strategies designed to avoid failure fostering country ownership developing global standards managing risk and vulnerability and measuring results in contrast to the structural adjustment era when policymakers were confident in their solutions this is an era of provisional governance in which key actors are aware of the possibility of failure even as they seek to inoculate themselves against it best considers the implications of this shift asking if it is a positive change and whether it is sustainable this title is available as open access on cambridge books online and via knowledge unlatched this book investigates the phenomenon of actuality inferences in which claims of ability are interpreted as descriptions of actual events instead of as descriptions of potentiality or possibility the findings contribute to a growing body of research in which computational models serve as an analytic tool for lexical and compositional semantics society cannot increase beyond its ability to acquire natural resources or to dispose safely of pollutants one need not be an ecologist or environmental scientist to understand the dangers implicit in an uncontrolled degradation of the environment calculating how many people each individual nation should have and determining the means by which politically various populations will be controlled calls for difficult decisions this book provides a concrete easily understood and realistic analysis of the scientific and legal dimensions of environmental stability miguel a santos outlines the current international ecological crises and defines them as the most serious threat to international world order and ecological stability the book is divided into five sections beginning with an examination of the ecological characteristics of human population and a discussion of population policies in developing and developed nations this section is followed by the construction of an analytic framework for the interaction of society with the environment further chapters provide an overview of natural resources and pollution and the criteria for determining the earth's carrying capacity for humans the final section considers the problems and prospects of international law and environmental protection although written for ecologists environmental scientists demographers political scientists economists and lawyers this book is not limited to them anyone interested in the relationship between the environment and society will find this book instructive and provocative
