in the post cold war world those engaged in making foreign policy seem adrift searching for new ideas despite the growing production and in some cases the sophistication of scholarly literature on questions in international relations policymakers seem to ignore much of this scholarly work in their search for new policy ideas the contributors to this volume examine the promise and possibilities of making contemporary international relations theory more relevant to the conduct of foreign policy and international affairs the essays in this volume assess the gap between theory and practice the volume has two parts the first part explores the failure of much international relations scholarship to address practical problems these essays consider problems arising from differences in the questions that concern academics and policymakers the institutional settings in which they operate and the perceptual and motivational baggage they carry essays in the second part of the book illustrate how international theory and research could be made useful to policy makers first these writers argue that scholars should pay more attention in theory to the way foreign policy is shaped by its domestic political context second scholars should do more to demonstrate how certain areas of specialized research shed light on specific policy challenges and how approaches based on the rational actor model can help make sense out of current policy dilemmas the contributors are steven j brams emily o goldman bruce jentleson eric v larson robert j lieber donna j nincic the late kenneth organski donald rothschild arthur stein and ernest j wilson iii in addition to the editors this book will be of interest to scholars and analysts in the areas of international relations and foreign policy and policy makers who wish to know how scholarship could inform their own work miroslav nincic is professor of political science university of california davis and is the author of numerous books and articles on international relations joseph lepgold is associate professor of government georgetown university international relations theory has been the site of intense debate in recent years a decade ago it was still possible to divide the field between three main perspectives realism liberalism and marxism not only have these approaches evolved in new directions they have been joined by a number of new isms vying for attention including feminism and constructivism international relations theory for the twenty first century is the first comprehensive textbook to provide an overview of all the most important theories within international relations written by an international team of experts in the field the book covers both traditional approaches such as realism and liberal internationalism as well as new developments such as constructivism poststructuralism and postcolonialism the book s comprehensive coverage of ir theory makes it the ideal textbook for teachers and students who want an up to date survey of the rich variety of theoretical work and for readers with no prior exposure to the subject this edition provides a systematic introduction to the principle theories in international relations it focuses on the main theoretical traditions realism liberalism international society and theories of international political economy it also includes two chapters on social constructivism and foreign policy this book is the longest standing and best selling ir theory text on the market popular for the authors clear and readable explanations of the various ir world views newer editions identify separate interpretive understandings positivism feminism and those influenced by phenomenology post modernism critical theory and constructivism providing students with both complete coverage of all of the key ir theories as well as invaluable study skills help this resource will ensure they excel at their course does the plethora of isms have any relevance to the real world of global politics and policymaking making sense of international relations theory addresses this and other questions by illustrating theories in action with each contributor presenting a particular framework for interpreting world affairs looking at approaches to understanding the interactions among three critical players china japan and the united states the authors of this text show that understanding the effects of cultural divides between asian and american policymakers is crucial to building effective policies in the future introduction to international relations allows students to develop the theoretical framework they need to understand and engage with international relations given that the world has moved well beyond the period of western colonialism and clearly into a durable period in which non western cultures have gained their political autonomy it is long past time that non western voices had a higher profile in debates about international relations not just as disciples of western schools of thought but as inventors of their own approaches western ir theory has had the advantage of being the first in the field and has developed many valuable insights but few would defend the position that it captures everything we need to know about world politics in this book acharya and buzan introduce non western ir traditions to a western ir audience and challenge the dominance of western theory an international team of experts reinforce existing criticisms that ir theory is western focused and therefore misrepresents and misunderstands much of world history by introducing the reader to non western traditions literature and histories relevant to how ir is conceptualised including case studies on chinese japanese south korean southeast asian indian and islamic ir this book redresses the imbalance and opens up a cross cultural comparative perspective on how and why thinking about ir has developed in the way it has as such it will be invaluable reading for both western and asian audiences interested in international relations theory while many texts on international relations deal only with ideologies this book goes beyond discussion of ideology to provide an understanding of how global economics politics and society operate the book begins with a history of the international studies association which was founded to develop empirically based knowledge and was opposed to ideological isms as biased guides to policy the book focuses on four major paradigms marxian mass society community building and rational choice with diagrams indicating their empirical predictions over time the marxian paradigm focuses on scientific claims of marx and engels the mass society paradigm explains why democracies become dysfunctional the community building paradigm explains how communities can be and are built at the local national regional and international levels the rational choice paradigm assembles proposed explanations of reason based economic political and social life to demonstrate what they have in common other candidates for paradigms are reviewed with a focus on why they need further development to become major paradigms at the decision making dyadic societal national and international system levels of analysis all academic disciplines periodically appraise their effectiveness evaluating the progress of previous scholarship and judging which approaches are useful and which are not although no field could survive if it did nothing but appraise its progress occasional appraisals are important and if done well can help advance the field this book investigates how international relations theorists can better equip themselves to determine the state of scholarly work in their field it takes as its starting point imre lakatos's influential theory of scientific change and in particular his methodology of scientific research programs msrp it uses msrp to organize its analysis of major research programs over the last several decades and uses msrp's criteria for theoretical progress to evaluate these programs the contributors appraise the progress of institutional theory varieties of realist and liberal theory operational code analysis and other research programs in international relations their analyses reveal the strengths and limits of lakatosian criteria and the need for metatheoretical metrics for evaluating scientific progress this is a major new edition of a highly regarded textbook on international relations theory which combines deep analysis into the diversity of thought within the major scholarly traditions and the guidance for students on doing their own theorising knud erik jorgensen analyses the nuances of the main contending theories and approaches their philosophical underpinnings and explains their use and relevance to different research agendas this is all placed within the context of cross cutting coverage of key current issues and debates of the philosophical foundations of ir theory and of why different theories are addressed to different research agendas all chapters have been fully revised and updated and a new chapter on the human nature tradition has been included to reflect the changes within the field this text is the most up to date and informative text on international relations theory and is an essential companion for all international relations students ideal as a brief main text for ir theories courses or as a supplemental text for ir american foreign policy or global studies courses international relations theory a primer second edition covers the main definitions concepts arguments and criticisms regarding the five predominant IR theories and approaches used in the field today: realism, liberalism, constructivism, economic structuralism, and feminism. Bridging the gap between theory and practice, it helps students understand and critique the theories and apply them to real-world issues.
