bancroff prize winner king philip s war the excruciating racial war colonists against indigenous peoples that erupted in new england in 1675 was in proportion to population the bloodiest in american history some even argued that the massacres and outrages on both sides were too horrific to deserve the name of a war the war s brutality compelled the colonists to defend themselves against accusations that they had become savages but jill lepore makes clear that it was after the war and because of it that the boundaries between cultures hitherto blurred turned into rigid ones king philip s war became one of the most written about wars in our history and lepore argues that the words strengthened and hardened feelings that in turn strengthened and hardened the enmity between indigenous peoples and anglos telling the story of what may have been the bitterest of american conflicts and its reverberations over the centuries lepore has enabled us to see how the ways in which we remember past events are as important in their effect on our history as were the events themselves participation among latin american immigrants in the united states to determine why so many remain outside the electoral process michael jones correia studied the political practices of first generation immigrants in new york city's multiethnic borough of queens through intensive interviews and participant observation he found that immigrant participation was stymied both by lack of encouragement to participate and by the requirement to renounce former citizenship which raised the fear of never being able to return to the country of origin the hesitation to naturalize as american citizens can extend over decades leaving immigrants adrift in a political limbo between two nations is the first qualitative study of how new immigrants assimilate into american political life jones correia reexamines assumptions about latino politics and the diversity of latino populations in the united states about the role of informal politics in immigrant communities and about gender differences in approaches to political activity
