this book chronicles five decades of struggle to introduce family planning into one of the largest most complex countries in sub saharan africa the democratic republic of the congo drc interweaving details of major political social and economic events into the history of family planning in drc formerly zaïre the book analyses the achievements and setbacks of five decades of programmatic work president mobutu s 1972 discourse on naissances désirables desirable births opened the door to organized family planning programs which gained considerable momentum in the 1980s despite societal norms favoring large families two pillages and armed conflict paralyzed development work during the decade of the 1990s and family planning was one of multiple public health programs that struggled to regain lost ground in the 2000s with new donor funding and implementing agencies the 2010s witnessed rapid programmatic expansion and improved strategies by 2018 family planning was operating as a well oiled machine but progress is fragile the book ends by tracing the deleterious effects of the colonial period to contemporary programming and individual contraceptive use it asks hard questions about donor financing and it details the six conditions needed to accelerate family planning progress in the drc in pursuit of providing millions of congolese women and men with the means of controlling their own fertility the book will be of interest to development and public health researchers and practitioners as well as to historians of the democratic republic of the congo the open access version of this book available at taylorfrancis.com has been made available under a creative commons attribution non cc by 4.0 license this book explores how living in accordance with the main ideals wealth fame social power of our individualistic meritocratic society comes at the expense of our psychological richness to protect or restore this richness the mainstream conception of success has to be extended beyond the standard definition the experience of success is too precious to keep it restricted within the imprisoning walls of the individualistic self there are more ways to be successful we have arrived in an era where success in life needs the inclusion of three main components the success of the other person the diversity of our value system beyond economic values and the survival success of nature the book is distinctive in that it gives a profound treatment of the reasons why many people feel discontented about the restrictive emphasis on individual success and excellence it deals not only with the limitations of meritocracy but also offers pathways to deal with them this book is a critical examination of the place and role of land in africa the role of land in political formation and national identification and the land as an economic resource within both national economic development and liberal globalization colonial and post colonial conflicts have been rooted in four related claims the struggle over scarce resources especially access to land resources abundance of natural resources mismanaged or appropriated by both the states local power systems and multinationals weak or absent articulated land tenure policies leading to speculation or hybrid policy framework and the imperatives of the global liberalization based on the free market principles to regulate the land question and mineral appropriation issue the actualization of these combined claims have led to conflicts among ethnic groups or between them and governments this book is not only about conflicts but also about local policy achievements that have been produced on the land question it provides a critical understanding of the forces and claims related to land tenure systems as part of the state policy and its system of governance this interdisciplinary edited collection explores the dynamics of global capitalist expansion through the concept of the commodity frontier applying an inductive approach rather than starting at the global level as most meta narratives have done this book sheds light on how local dynamics have shaped the process of capitalist expansion into uncommodified spaces contributors demonstrate that ultimately the evolution of frontier zones and their reconfiguration over time have transformed human ecology labour relations and social economic and political structures across the globe chapters examine agricultural and pastoral frontiers natural habitats and commodity frontiers with fossil fuels and mineral resources located in various regions of the world including south america asia africa and the arabian gulf this book explains how and why belgium a small but influential european country was changed through its colonial activities in the congo from the first expeditions in 1880 to the mobutu regime in the 1980s belgian politics diplomacy economic activity and culture were influenced by the imperial experience belgium and the congo 1885 1980 yields a better understanding of the congo s past and present the terrifying reign of leopold II king of belgium was marked by atrocities in the congo murder enslavement and violence was used in pursuit of raw rubber following advances in industry rubber became a valuable commodity at first the congolese thought this new trade would bring prosperity to their country instead what ensued was murderous and exploitative barbarity of a scale never seen in africa between 1890 and 1910 the belgian forces occupying the congo in africa perpetrated horrific atrocities against the indigenous population king leopold II had brought congo directly under his control he permitted his soldiers to commit mass murder and enslavement rapes mass amputations beatings and degradations of the population millions of congolese died in the midst of this atrocious misrule belgium however profited enormously and leopold II spent some of his revenues from rubber sales on grandiose public building projects edmund dene morel was a british politician and campaigner who worked for years investigating and publicizing the brutality of belgian rule in the congo he was appalled when britain stood idly by as leopold II s tyranny ensued morel first published this book in 1906 while this reprint is derived from an updated edition of 1919 by this time the king had died having finally been forced to surrender his control of the colony to the government of belgium what s in a name as osumaka likaka argues in this illuminating study the names that congolese villagers gave to european colonizers reveal much about how africans experienced and reacted to colonialism the arrival of explorers missionaries administrators and company agents allowed africans to observe westerners physical appearances behavior and cultural practices at close range often resulting in subtle yet trenchant critiques by naming europeans africans turned a universal practice into a local mnemonic system recording and preserving the village s understanding of colonialism in the form of pithy verbal expressions that were easy to remember and transmit across localities regions and generations methodologically innovative naming colonialism advances a new approach that shows how a cultural process the naming of europeans can provide a point of entry into economic and social histories drawing on archival documents and oral interviews likaka encounters and analyzes a welter of coded fragments the vivid epithets congolese gave to rubber company agents the home burner leopard beat beat the hippopotamus hide whip clearly conveyed the violence that underpinned colonial extractive economies other names were subtler hinting at derogatory meaning by way of riddles metaphors or symbols to which the europeans were oblivious africans thus emerge from this study as autonomous actors whose capacity to observe categorize and evaluate reverses our usual optic providing a critical window on central african colonialism in its local and regional dimensions
