Central Asia is a fascinating region yet remote and unfamiliar to many people this new study provides an introduction to the politics of Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Uzbekistan, Turkmenistan, and Turkmenistan.

The disintegration of the Soviet Union in 1991 rapidly and irrevocably transformed Central Asia's political landscape. This region of five sovereign states with a population of some fifty million people quickly became a major focus of interest and influence for competing poles of power. The eminent contributors to this volume offer a four part analysis of the region's new importance in world affairs. Rajan Menon examines the place of Central Asia in a global perspective; Eugene Rumer considers the perspective of the post 9/11 United States; Dimitri Trenin looks at the region from the standpoint of traditional hegemon Russia; Huasheng Zhao provides the view from economic superpower in the making, China.

This volume is the first comprehensive scholarly analysis of the strategic reconfiguration of Central Asia as Russia has become more disengaged from the nations in the region and as these nations have developed new relations to the South East and West. The international implications are enormous because of the rich energy sources oil and natural gas located in the Caspian Sea area. The authors assess a variety of internal security policy challenges confronting these states. For example, the potential for conflict arising from such factors as a mixed ethnic population, resource scarcity particularly in relation to water management and an Islamic revival. They also examine the security policy content of relations between the Central Asian states and regional and international powers specifically the stakes, interests and policies of Russia, China, Iran, Turkey and the United States. These internal challenges and the evolution of relations with external powers may result in new cooperative relationships but they may also lead to destabilizing rivalry and interstate enmity in Central Asia. It is important to identify new patterns of relevance for future security cooperation in the region but the potential for a new security system or for new institutions to manage security in the region remains uncertain. These issues are explored by a team of prominent specialists from Western Europe, the United States, Russia and China.

In January 1996 the U.S. Army War College's Strategic Studies Institute (SSI) and the Center for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS) hosted a conference on Asian security to the year 2000. One focus of the conferees was the growing relevance of events in Central Asia. Perhaps nowhere on the continent was the cold war transformation in the security environment more dramatic than in Central Asia. There the sudden retraction of Soviet power and decline in superpower competition was rapidly followed by the creation of new states whose prospects for legitimacy, development and independent survival were at best uncertain. The half decade that has followed the dissolution of the Soviet Union has not been sufficient time for any of the vast challenges facing Central Asia to have been addressed definitively nor can we be confident that a stable regional system has coalesced. Yet the past 5 years have produced an emerging pattern of relations amenable to tentative analysis. Lieutenant Colonel Dianne Smith of SSI details the complex problems facing the region and then turns her attention to Central Asia's evolving security structure by invoking the great game analogy. She takes the perspective that for this part of the continent it is the nations surrounding the region that will play the primary role in shaping its future although the new central asian nations are participants not pawns in this struggle for influence colonel smith s analysis focuses on the interests and actions of five of those surrounding nations iran pakistan india russia and china each has significant interests in central asia and each thus far has tempered to some degree its actions to advance those interests in recognition of the competing objectives of the others for the united states a power vacuum in central asia seems a remote concern at first blush
